PATHETIC PICTURE IN TRAGEDY

Elizabeth Carman, nine-year-old daughter of the accused woman, who was in the dining room of her home on the night of the murder. Constance Williams says of her: "There is no more affecting picture in the whole grim story of the murder of Mrs. Bailey than the picture of this little girl, sitting there dreaming in the big armchair, while not fifty feet away a murderous fury was incubating a murderous deed."

HOW LEWIS GIRL LEFT HER HOME

"I am sure Gladys eloped with Dean Jones," cried Mrs. John F. Lewis, mother of Gladys Lewis, the missing Medford girl, when she came to the AMERICAN office today to ask help in the search for her daughter.

Gladys Lewis is seventeen, a junior at the Medford High School. Arthur Dean Jones, who is twenty-one, lives at No. 414 Ashmont street, Milton. His wife is eighteen and there is a three months' old baby.

"His wife came to my house the day he and my daughter went away," added Mrs. Lewis. "She met Gladys, and Gladys cried and told her how sorry she was that it had all happened, and promised faithfully that she would not go away."

This dramatic meeting between the man's wife and the girl he had begged to go away with him is only one of the affecting features of Mrs. Lewis' story. She came with her husband to the AMERICAN, and said:

"I want your help in finding Gladys. The police are working, but gan 'Dear Gladys,' and ended 'Your of them."

Then, beginning at the beginning, she told this story:

TOLD MOTHER OF MEETING.

"A month ago, Gladys went to visit Miss Ethelyn Smith in Lexington Heights. This Mr. Jones was there working as an electrician's helper. He is employed at No. 29 Boylston street, where he registered as a single man.

"He was working for three days in Lexington, and seemed to be able to finish his work by 2 o'clock every day. One afternoon he and Miss Smith and my daughter and a Mr. Taylor, who worked with him, went for a walk up to the reservoir near the Smith home.

"When Gladys came home from her visit, she told me all about it. She said she had met a man named Dean Jones, and said: 'I gave him my address, and he is coming to call.'

"I said: 'Well, I will look him over.' I knew it was no use to forbid him seeing her. That would just drive her to see him clandestinely.

"Three days later she got two letters from him in the morning. She got two other letters later; they began 'Dear Gladys,' and ended 'Your dear boy.' In one of those first letters he said: 'I haven't seen you for three or four days, and it seems like a year. I want to see you very much.'

FIRST CALL AT HOME.

"He came one afternoon for his first call. Gladys was over in Malden taking her music lesson. I talked with him. He looked like a nice average young fellow. He said: 'Don't judge me on these clothes. They're

WEBSTER READY FOR AIR TRIP

Clifford Webster will give a remarkable demonstration of flying in its most highly developed form at Nantasket Beach tomorrow afternoon, and the AMERICAN invites all Boston—and all New England, for that matter—to come down and see this wonderful thing.

Those who come, besides seeing a thing that would have been unbelievable ten years ago, will have an opportunity to earn a share in $250 in cash awards.

Webster at Revere last Saturday—flying over a quarter of a million of people—dropped cards which admitted to the AMERICAN'S Home Cities Contest—and those lucky enough to get cards entered the contest this past week.

IN TOMORROW'S SUNDAY AMERICAN THE WINNERS OF THE PRIZES FOR THAT CONTEST WILL BE ANNOUNCED. IF YOU WERE AT REVERE LAST SATURDAY, BUY THE AMERICAN TOMORROW AND SEE WHETHER YOU WON A PRIZE.

The exact nature of this contest

BALLOT BOXES ON BEACH.

It will not be necessary to mail the cards to the AMERICAN, nor to bring them in. There will be big ballot boxes at different places on the beach, and after writing your one word, or two, or perhaps as many as five, for five is the limit, you need only add your name and address and—drop the card in a ballot box. Then, if you are sufficiently clever, the AMERICAN will have a gold award for you the following week.

FIRING ORDERED STOPPED

The quick and vigorous protest by Hull officials and residents against their women, children and property being shelled in target practice from the harbor forts has brought speedy relief.

President Francis S. Bryant of the Old Beacon Club received the following telegram today from the War Office at Washington:

"All firing has been ordered stopped."

It was in the old Beacon Club building that 120 Hull women and girls were playing whist when a 15-pound shot screamed over the roof and plowed into the ground nearby. The women say that, if the missile had come through the building, deaths and injuries would have been inevitable.

President Bryant of the Old Beacon Club says:

"It's about time that some drastic action was taken. This occurrence is nothing short of crime. Think of the loss of life that would have occurred had that shell gone into our clubhouse when our wives and daughters were gathered there.

"From the standpoint of the Summer and all-the-year-round residents, the change taken with human life by the gunners is nothing short of criminal.

"Take the case of Mrs. Cannell, who was busy in her kitchen. Here is the shock she received, as told today by her:

"Had one of those shells landed five feet nearer three of us women would have been killed right on the spot. My maid, myself and a neighbor were preparing a meal for a houseful of guests when, without any warning, came a whirring sort of a noise.

"We all jumped back frightened. When we collected ourselves we looked out in the yard. Not five feet away there was a big hole torn in the lawn. The hole was eighteen inches deep. Had the shell come a little nearer it would have torn through the kitchen where we were working, and it couldn't have helped killing the three of us.

"My guests were naturally frightened. It broke up all our festivities. I couldn't sleep a wink last night. In fact, I guess no one did around this neighborhood. It was an awful experience, but we are thankful no one was killed.

"This should be stopped. I hope the men in authority will do something to prevent such life-endangering practice."

Bancroft Resigns Port Chairmanship

Governor Walsh has received the written resignation of General Hugh Bancroft as chairman of the board of port directors. The letter stated that the chairman wished the resignation accepte at once because he wished to enter a private business. The term of office of Chairman Bancroft and all of the other port directors expired last week, but it was expected that Chairman Bancroft would remain in charge of port affairs until his successor was appointed.

Storm and Flood Kill 3 in Scranton

SCRANTON, Pa., July 11.—This city was practically isolated today as a result of a terrific rain storm and flood which struck Northeastern Pennsylvania late yesterday, killing at least three persons and doing damage estimated close to $1,000,000.

The dead: Ray Ellis of South Scranton, drowned; Mrs. Mary Gordon of Carbondale and W. D. White of Wilkesbarre, struck by lightning.

Melville E. Ingalls Dead in Virginia

Melville E. Ingalls, formerly a resident of Boston and at one time president of the Indianapolis, Cincinnati & Lafayette Railroad, is dead of heart failure at Hot Springs, Va. He was a member of the Massachusetts Senate in 1887. He was born in Hartford, Me., September 8, 1842. He was reared on a farm. He was educated at Bridgton Academy and Bowdoin College and got an LL.B. from Harvard in 1862 and A. M. degrees from Bowdoin and Wabash Colleges.

Steamer Invermore Passengers Rescued

ST JOHN'S, N. F., July 11.—All the passengers of the steamer Invermore, which stranded on the Labrador coast, near Brig Harbor, were rescued today, according to a wireless dispatch received from her commanders, Captain Keene. He reported that the vessel was filled with water, but that he believes she can be refloated.

Roblin Government Wins in Manitoba

WINNIPEG, Man., July 11.—Although returns from yesterday's general provincial election were not complete early today, the re-election of the government of Sir Redmond Roblin and a Conservative Legislature seemed assured.

POLICE WILL NOT REVEAL IDENTITY

FREEPORT, L. I., July 11.—Two developments today added force to the statement of District Attorney Smith that he has a new theory of the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, for which Mrs. Florence Carman is in jail at Mineola.

These developments were:

1. The story of a new witness that Dr. Carman, in spite of his denail, did have a 38-calibre revolver of the sort that killed Mrs. Bailey.

2. The statement of District Attorney Smith that he has found a new eyewitness who will be kept under cover until the next hearing on the case.

The story of the revolver comes from a negro boy, Benjamin Gagner, now employed in Manhattan but who worked till recently for Dr. Carman. He said that the physician had a blue steel 38-calibre revolver always loaded at his house, where it might be seen at all times by members of the family, including Mrs. Carman.

This evidence caused the search for the weapon to be resumed. A box of 38 calibre cartridges was found hidden in the attic of the Carman home before the physician's wife was arrested. Dr. Carman has steadily denied possessing any 38 calibre revolver, declaring the only weapons he had were a .22 calibre gun and an old rusty revolver kept in the garage.

MRS CARMAN LEADS DEFENCE.

COURT DENIES PETITIONS OF 'CHIP' ROBINSON

A motion to quash the indictment against Lawrence ("Diamond Chip") Robinson, charged with the murder of Police Inspector Thomas H. Norton, was overruled today by Judge Keating in the Superior Criminal Court.

Judge Keating also overruled a motion permitting the defendant to withdraw his plea of "Not guilty" made to the indictment, but allowed a petition authorizing the expense of employing an expert on firearms, an expert physician or surgeon and persons skilled in searching for information.

H. C. Blanchard was appointed junior counsel for Robinson, to assist his father, John H. Blanchard.

Robinson goes on trial July 20.

$100,000,000 Chinese Loan.

LONDON, July 11.—A Pekin dispatch to the Daily Telegraph says that China is about to apply to the bankers of the five-Power group for another loan of $100,000,000.

VANITIE IS OFF IN FRONT AS YACHTS RACE

NEWPORT, R. I., July 11—In a fog "as thick as mud" the three cup defence candidates, Resolute, Vanitie and Defiance, set out today in another race under the auspices of the New York Yacht Club. The wind was blowing about eight miles an hour when the yachts started, and was steadily freshening. Today's race was a thresh to windward for fifteen miles and return.

The first mark was off Block Island. After considerable jockeying at the starting line, the three boats got off in a bunch, with the Vanitie first across.

The starting times were:

Vanitie	11:16:10
Defiance	11:16:56
Resolute	11:17:00

This was the first race in which the three have raced that the Resolute was the last to cross. The Vanitie got away well to windward with the Defiance close in her wake. The boats stood out to sea on a long tack, using every available stitch of canvas to catch the breeze. At 12:45 the Vanitie on a port tack was holding the Resolute and Defiance both on a starboard tack, by a good margin.

REITHAL, SHOT BY BOMBARD, DIED TODAY

WORCESTER, July 11.—Superintendent Erhardt Reithal of the Pondville Woolen Mill at Auburn, one of the victims of Thomas H. Bombard's tragic shooting Thursday, died this noon at Worcester City Hospital. In another bed in the same room was his daughter, Miss Alma Reithal, also a victim of Bombard's shot.

Another death is expected. Mrs. Lydia King, with whom Bombard was said to be infatuated, is dying. Miss Reithal, who escaped with arm, shoulder and breast wounds, is expected to recover.

Bombard is held in $6,000 bail for continued hearing next Thursday, pending the condition of his victims. It is now said that a charge of first degree murder will be lodged against him.

Superintendent Reithal was a native of Worcester, forty years old. He had been superintendent at Pondville twelve years. He was one of the leading German-Americans of Worcester County and was a Mason. Besides Alma, the wounded daughter, he leaves a widow and three other children.

"Ned," Oldest Work Horse, Is Dead

"Ned," the oldest horse in New England, and the property of James F. Weir of Somerville, is dead at the age of forty. "Ned" hauled produce wagons for more than thirty years. He had won eleven first prizes in work horse parades, also the Massachusetts S. P. C. A. gold medal in 1905 and a special silver medal in 1908.

my work clothes'. I told him I was more interested in the skin than in his clothes.

"I asked him where he lived, and he told me he was born in New York, and studied electricity and was earning $40 a week.

"He only stayed an hour while, and Gladys acted like the perch talking with him for a moment when he said goodby.

"Saturday night at 7 o'clock he came again. She got her coat. I said: 'Where are you going?' She said: 'Dean wants me to take a walk.' I told her not to be back in an hour or she would be scared, and not to get back after 10 o'clock. They had been to Lexington Monday and he said they missed the car.

"He came again Monday. I asked why he kept Gladys out so late, and he said his watch was broken. He said it was a hundred years old and an heirloom.

PROPOSED MARRIAGE.

"He came often after that, and I protested if it stormed. Gladys did not go out at night with him after that. He always came in the afternoon. Usually they would go for walks and sometimes to the cinematograph.

"Then one night she said: 'Madam, Dean wants me to go away with him and get married.'

"I was so surprised I could hardly speak. I said: 'Why, Gladys, you can't do it, are you?'

"She said: 'No, I don't want to be married. I want to be either and be a nurse.'

"I said: 'You're too young to get married. You don't need to run away, anyway. Wait two or three years. I'll send you to Boston Academy next year.'

"She was happy to hear that. She promised faithfully she would not go away with him. I trusted her. She said: 'He's been a nice boy, but I don't want to. Dean is all the time threatening me to go, but I won't.'

"Then he was begging her to go away with him, he told her he had $10,000 coming to him in August, and told her they would go away and go to Alaska. Another time she told me:

"'Dean is surprised that I have never traveled around any more. He's going to take me to New York some time soon.' I think he may be a clew to where they've gone.

MEETS JONES' WIFE.

"Thursday was the day her week was away. In the afternoon, she started for her music lesson as usual. She said she would be back at 4 o'clock. But she didn't come.

"Before she went I had told her: 'Now, Gladys, promise me you won't meet that man.' For by now I had gotten suspicious and had observed her not to meet him. She said she promised.

"While she was at her music lesson, a girl came to the door. She was about eighteen. She asked if I was Mrs. Lewis.

"I said I was. She asked if my daughter knew a man named Arthur Dean Jones.

"Yes,' I said, and I told her how he had been coming to see Gladys.

"'Well,' this poor girl said, 'he is my husband. We were married two years ago. We have a little baby.'

"I felt so sorry for her, and so mad at this Mr. Jones. I told her: 'You just stay here till my daughter comes home. We'll see what she says.'

"So she waited. After a while Gladys came. I didn't tell her anything about her being late, but before she could I said to her: 'Gladys, sometimes he meets her when she is out and comes home with her. He may come this time.'

"But he didn't. Gladys was alone when she came home.

BORROWED $100 AND WENT.

"'Gladys,' I said, when Gladys came in, 'I want you to meet this girl. She is your Mr. Jones' wife.'

"Well, we all cried and felt terribly. And Gladys cried and said: 'Oh, I'm so awfully sorry. You poor dear. I'm awfully sorry.' And she was so awfully tender-hearted. She said: 'He asked me to go away with him in August. He asked me all the time, but I'm not young. He always pretended to be a single man.'

"Mrs. Jones was visiting some people on Harrison avenue, Medford, and Gladys met her there. We all went to bed early that night. Gladys went up at 9:30 and he went up with the girl of Jones that night went to the girl's father. He told her to borrow some car in Medford to get his wife. But he told the father: 'I've just had word that my child-bride is dying. I've got an elevator well out at Arlington. You go to get your car and come with me.' So he borrowed $100 from his wife's mother and borrowed a suitcase, and packed three suits of clothes, and at 1 o'clock that night, he left the house.

"When I went upstairs I looked in at Gladys' door. She was in the room with her sister, though in a separate bed, and she seemed to be asleep. I thought she had forgotten her trouble for her future had scolded her that night, and I was never to have anything to do with Mr. Jones, and she had promised faithfully.

RAN AWAY AT NIGHT.

"I am a very light sleeper. Some time in the night I heard someone downstairs, and I called down. Gladys called back that you. What's the matter?

"It was Gladys' voice. She said: 'It's all right, mother. I'm coming home.' I thought she had changed her mind and got a drink.

"So I thought it was all right. Then Gladys used often to go out in the back door and up on the roof to sleep. Then I heard the outside door open. I supposed she was going there to bed that way.

"And I suppose he was waiting outside for her. So the next I heard she was gone.

DESCRIPTION OF GIRL.

Then she furnished a description of her daughter. Here it is:

Height—Five feet four inches.

Age—Seventeen.

Weight—One hundred and ten pounds.

Complexion—Good, clear, light.

Eyes—Brown.

Hair—Light brown.

Clothing—She took away two suits of clothes, a green dress with brown polka dots and one tuck in the skirt; a short coat of the same material with richly embroidered linen collar and cuffs; a white shirt waist; two hats, one a panama trimmed with narrow black velvet and the other green trimmed with yellow silk and a black pom pom; a plaid skirt with red girdle, and a red stripe trimmed with smoked pearl buttons; a gray raglan coat with a box pleat down the back and gray buttons.

Jewelry—A gold watch chain guard with the gold letter "G."

Marks—A brown finger stands out a little. She is left-handed.

BROCK WINS LONDON-PARIS AIR CONTEST

HENDON, England, July 11.—Winging his way through 276 miles of soupy fog, W. L. Brock, an American aviator, won the round trip London-to-Paris air race today after a thrilling flight which ten rivals competed against the best talent of Europe.

Brock's elapsed time for the distance was 7 hours and 3 minutes. He left the 13th Hussars' field, Hendon, and the Blue aerodrome on the outskirts of Paris in 3 hours 33 minutes and 24 seconds. The return trip was made in 3 hours 29 minutes 36 seconds.

The American was given a tremendous ovation when he arrived here after his record flight. He was lifted bodily from his aerial plaything this Summer, having won the aerial derby around London several weeks ago. The prize suggests a trophy and $5,000 in cash.

Brock's nearest rival, Bonilette, Folcestone, Bisson and other cities along the route gave crowds cheered when their factory whistles were tooted. Brock used a Morane monoplane and covered it faultlessly. He said the fog over the channel was so dense that he feared he would lose his way.

Boston Not in Hands of Devil, Is Hope of Rev. W. F. Crafts

Automobile, early marriage and hope for Boston are three particular points made by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts of Washington, D. C., lecturer for the International Reform Bureau, in addressing the Y. P. C. U. convention which is in progress in this city. He said in part:

"Why should we cast aside our Anglo-Saxon traditions to welcome the nude in art to our galleries and plays? French plays, plays and novels should be quarantined here.

"The average young person should marry at twenty-one. Two young people starting life together are far less likely to appear in the divorce court than two who marry after each has formed rigid opinions on the important questions of life.

"Boston is not in the hands of the devil, and if you believe it, the conditions can be improved. I believe in the statement of the famous old prophet who said that, with 100 men who backed God and feared sin, he could reform the world. I am sure that number could do the same in Boston."

Elbert Hubbard Hits Leisure Class Before Shoe Men

Elbert Hubbard was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Massachusetts Shoe Retailers' Association at Mechanics Hall. He told of a meeting he had with the Earl of Yarmouth, saying: "The Earl said: 'You know, we have to insure class in America.' 'Oh, yes, we have,' I said. 'We call them loafers.' I finally told him a better way is wind instrument.

"A well dressed, educated hobo is a good characterization for some men who live at ease. They waste, use, consume, and produce nothing. There is no choice between that kind of a hobo and the hobo who eats out of the tomato can."

Beware of Faulty Border Line on New Five-Dollar Bills

Boston bankers today warned business men not to be on the lookout for counterfeit $5 bills. The alleged counterfeits are made by means of a process which is said to imitate the paper itself. This has been overcome in the new counterfeit by washing the printing off $1 notes. The paper is then replaced on the counterfeit $5 bills.

Failure of one of the border lines to run parallel is a telltale mark on the counterfeit.

Exports and Imports Double Last Year's

Boston's commerce for the week ending July 3, 1914, was as follows: Imports, $2,350,122, increase over 1913 of $1,035,939; exports, $1,722,156, increase over 1913 of $642,609.

PUBLISH TERMS OF CARRANZA-VILLA COMPACT

By JOHN W. ROBERTS.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

TORREON, Mex., July 11.—The long awaited report of the Carranza-Villa reconciliation conference was made public today. Three important points are impressed in the report, which treats fully of the labors of the delegates for the five days they were in session. These are:

1—Leadership of Carranza is recognized as first chief of the revolution with full authority over all military operations.

2—Citizen General Francisco Villa is recognized as first chief of the division of the north, giving full recognition to Citizen Carranza as first chief of the Constitutionalist army as a whole.

3—General Villa shall be furnished by Carranza with all supplies necessary for the continuation of military operations that the former may see fit to demand.

The failure of Carranza to furnish supplies called for by Villa caused the breach between the two chiefs. This was the chief point at issue and Villa was wholly victorious in the solution that was reached.

FREE HAND IN SONORA.

The agreement fulfills to the plan of Guadalupe, the platform of the Constitutionalists, was proposed by Villa's delegates. One was that the president ad interim, or provisional president of the republic, call an election immediately upon the triumph of the revolution. This was evidently intended to eliminate Carranza as soon as the revolution was ended, but it was amended to provide that immediately following the revolution's triumph a convention should be called at which a program of government should be formulated, the time of holding the election fixed and the nominations made.

Villa consented to his elimination as a presidential candidate by agreeing that no chief of the Constitutionalists should be nominated.

Deciding the factional dispute in Sonora, the delegates held that Carranza should be given a free hand.

CHOOSING A CABINET.

Villa's delegates proposed that the conference select a cabinet for Carranza, but this was amended to provide that a list of men suitable for cabinet officers should be drawn up.

Those named were:

Fernand Iglesias Calderon, Luis Cabrera, General Antonio I. Villareal, Dr. Miguel Silva, Ingeniero Manuel Bonilla, Ingeniero Alberto Pani, General Eduardo Hay, General Pesqueira Miguel Dias Lombardi, Jose Vasconcelos, Miguel Alessio Robles and Aredrico Gonsales Garza.

General Villareal Senor Bonilla and Dr. Silva also attended the conference, asked that their names be withdrawn, but they were allowed to stand.

GIRL CHRISTENS NEVADA, GIANT BATTLESHIP

A winsome, eleven-year-old girl from Reno, Nevada, divided attention with a brand new battleship at the big yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company at Quincy today.

The little girl is Eleanor Ann Siebert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Siebert of Reno and cousin to Governor Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada.

The battleship is the latest of Uncle Samuel's bulldogs of the sea, the Nevada, whose launching was scheduled for 1:30 today.

As the battleship is named for Nevada, Governor Oddie of that State had the say as to who should christen the vessel. He picked out his little cousin Eleanor, who came East, all by herself, to perform the girlish anticipation of naming the battleship.

Unusual preparations were made at the Fore River yards today for this christening on account of the number of high naval and other officials who were on the list of guests.

SECRETARY DANIELS PRESENT.

Secretary Daniels of the Navy moved up from Washington on the Federal Express to see the Nevada take to the water. He was to be met at Quincy by Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, who has been inspecting the big fighting machines of England. Mrs. Daniels, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman of Nevada, and Mrs. Newlands, wife of Senator Newlands of the same State. These made the party to Quincy by water in Secretary Daniels' yacht, the Dolphin.

So there was an unusually brilliant and interesting throng of spectators gathered at the shipyards as the hour for the launching approached.

Officials of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company were on hand early to meet the distinguished guests.

A special train from Boston brought a considerable company. The train was switched to the company's private track and run, as usual, close to the launching platform.

Little Miss Siebert was all ready to carry out her important part of the launching program with promptness and accuracy. On the launching platform a space was reserved, close to the knife-like prow of the battleship, on which the little girl was to break a bottle of champagne.

SENDS BIG SHIP AWAY.

Miss Eleanor had well rehearsed to herself the few but important words she was to say when she broke the bottle, as follows: "I christen thee Nevada."

And she didn't mean to make any mistake about breaking that bottle, either, for it isn't every day that a little girl of ten travels way from Reno to Quincy, Mass., to put a name on a battleship.

The battleship Nevada is a sister ship of the Oklahoma, both of which are 500 tons larger than their immediate predecessors, the New York and Texas. The principal dimensions of the Nevada are: Length over all, 583 feet; beam, 95 feet 2½ inches; mean draft, 28 feet 6 inches; displacement, 27,500 tons.

Professor Henri Lichtenberger of the Sorbonne, Paris, will go to Harvard this Fall as exchange professor from France, according to an announcement made at Harvard. He will deliver during the first half year and will give two regular courses, one on Nietzsche and another on Rabelais.

4 Days Without Food, Drops Unconscious

Harry B. Fisher, of No. 2 Pine street, Holyoke, who, according to friends, has not eaten for four days, collapsed on the sidewalk in front of No. 12 Bromfield street, West Roxbury. He was hurried to the City Hospital, where he is now under treatment.

Gilmore Not to Run.

BROCKTON, July 11.—Congressman Edward Gilmore says he will not be a candidate for re-election.

MACK FAVORS HEARST TO BE U. S. SENATOR

NEW YORK, July 11.—Norman E. Mack, national committeeman, national committeeman today he would not be a candidate for the United States Senate, to succeed William Randolph Hearst. William Church Osborne, as Democratic State committee chairman, as of the type of man who should be nominated. Mr. Mack also declared that Governor Sulzer should be renominated.

He said:

"I personally appreciate all the good things my Democratic friends throughout the State have been saying about me in connection with the Senatorship, but I have determined that the nomination of the Senator after giving the matter consideration, I merely want to say that I cannot afford to be a candidate for any political office.

"Whom would you suggest for the United States Senate?"

"I have heard three names besides my own mentioned—Governor Dix, Judge Edgar T. Williams, Church Osborne and William F. McCombs. Any one of them would make a good Senator, and I understand the Democratic party will be my candidate, and I will give him most cordial support.

"Whom do you prefer for Governor?"

"The logical candidate is naturally Governor Sulzer. I hear no other name mentioned. He has made an excellent Governor. I know of no other man who would be entitled to the support of the party if renominated he will be elected."

"Do you think Colonel Roosevelt will run?"

"I have no confidence. Sometimes it sounds like real war talk, and if conditions change, Roosevelt would be the logical candidate, but I am satisfied Governor Wilson would be re-elected."

Mr. Mack and Mrs. Mack sail for Europe today on the Augusta Victoria. They expect to return in September. While abroad Mr. Mack, who is chairman of the New York Panama Exposition Committee, will confer with officials of the Exposition in regard to the plan for obtaining foreign representation at San Francisco next year.

Arbitration Board Decreases Strikes

As a result of the work of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, its records show a decrease of more than fifty per cent in the number of labor strikes in Massachusetts during June of this year as compared with the same month a year ago.

Four thousand one hundred and forty employes were thrown out of employment by the twenty-three strikes in June last year. Only 1,928 were directly affected by the eleven strikes last month.

'Mental Suicide' at 80 Ends His Woes

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 11.—William Bartlett is dead from "mental suicide." Bartlett tried to shoot himself, using a revolver that was not loaded. He grieved over his failure and an hour later was dead. The physicians said sheer exercise of mental desire for death caused his end.

ANOTHER CARMAN MYSTERY

husband and her lawyer worked to secure her release from incarceration on the charge that she murdered Mrs. Bailey. Mrs. Carman took full charge of her defense and the work to prove that she did not shoot Mrs. Bailey. Every affidavit that is being prepared by Attorney George M. Levy in the attack upon the story of witnesses who have testified against her, was submitted to her. She read them all before they were executed as final and gave direction as to the securing of other evidence in her own behalf.

Attorney Levy did not seem particularly pleased by the activity of his client.

"She makes me take all the papers over to her, and she reads them carefully," said he.

Mrs. Carman arose at 7 a. m. after a good night's rest. She expressed pleasure at the way in which matters were shaping for her release.

TO TALK WITH MOTHER.

Convinced that accounts of the Carman home can clear up the mystery surrounding the murder, District Attorney Smith intimated today that he would again question Mrs. Elizabeth Carman, mother of Mrs. Carman. Mrs. Carman is seriously ill, but the district attorney is determined to secure from her all knowledge that she has of the events occurring in the Carman residence on the night of the murder.

Sheriff Pettit today received a second letter from the woman who wrote him yesterday confessing that she killed Mrs. Bailey. This letter, like the first one, was mailed at Station E, Boston, and read as follows:

"Why don't you take some action? Why don't you attempt to find me? Mr. Carman can give directions."

The whole complexion of the mystery was altered today by a new theory which the State authorities have accepted as displacing the original one that the bullet entered first through the window from outside the house.

Mrs. Carman is still held to be either principal or accessory to the crime. But the authorities now say:

"The murdered was not outside the house. He was INSIDE DR. CARMAN'S OFFICE when the fatal shot was fired."

HOW THEORY WAS WORKED OUT.

The new theory has been carefully reasoned out, and District Attorney Smith believes it is invulnerable. This is the line of deduction which was followed:

First—Dr. Carman's story is the only basis for the theory that the bullet was fired through the broken window.

Second—The nature of Mrs. Bailey's wound makes this story impossible. The bullet struck Mrs. Bailey's left shoulder, moved downward through her back and lungs and heart and lodged at last in the heavy muscles of the chest, WELL BELOW THE POINT OF ENTRY.

Therefore, the bullet came from above and behind Mrs. Bailey.

Now the window sill in Dr. Carman's office is like any ordinary window sill—about three feet above the floor. The bullet, if it came from the broken pane, came from less than four feet above the floor. Mrs. Bailey was a woman about five feet, six inches tall. If the bullet came through the window, and if Mrs. Bailey was standing as Dr. Carman said, the bullet would have moved UPWARD through her body, instead of DOWNWARD as it did.

ITS ACE BULLET COURSE.

If Mrs. Bailey had been sitting in a chair, her shoulder, where the bullet entered, would still have been slightly above the broken windowpane.

If she had been on the operating table under examination the bullet could not have entered her shoulder.

The only possible way that the bullet could have made the wound it did, if it came through the window, was if Mrs. Bailey was sitting on the floor. And that is ridiculous. There is no way in a month of Sundays that she could have been in that position the day after the shooting, concluded.

"Let them search these places, and they may find the gun, although it is probable that it was thrown into the sea, or some pond, or sunk in the marsh."

Dr. Carman maintained a defiant attitude today, refusing to allow the examination of his books by the authorities, although he had previously said he would permit this.

Now he says he has changed his mind and proposes to stand on the right of keeping confidence between doctor and patient. It is intimated he may be arrested as an accessory after the fact unless he tells what he knows, as District Attorney Smith declares he believes Dr. Carman is withholding valuable evidence.

FIGHT FOR BOOKS.

Following the announcement that consideration of the shooting of Mrs. Bailey will not be made by the Grand Jury until July 21—when it is known that Mrs. Carman must stay in Mineola jail until that time—District Attorney Smith explained that when he was in order to protect Mrs. Carman's counsel to cross-examine E. T. Bordes, the insurance man, now detained in Mineola jail, who says he saw a woman resembling Mrs. Carman at the scene of the shooting.

Smith said he would make a determined fight for the doctor's books. He considers these valuable for two reasons.

First, to see if Mrs. Bailey had met Dr. Carman previously and, if so, how often.

Second, to learn, by process of elimination, the names of the two women patients who fled from the office after the shooting, and whose testimony may be of value to the prosecution.

YEARS OF TORTURE FOR MRS. CARMAN, SAYS DORTHY DIX

By DOROTHY DIX.

The most terrible illustration of the madness of jealousy that this community has seen in a long time is furnished by the Carman case. It is easy enough to point out Mrs. Carman's fault in the matter, to show how she has let jealousy poison her whole life and wreck her home, and possibly drive her to crime, and to deduce therefrom a warning and a nice moral lesson for other suspicious wives.

Undoubtedly Mrs. Carman has been both foolish and wrong, but no one who has been brought in personal contact with the woman herself but is consumed with pity for her.

For no matter what the future may hold for her, whether it be imprisonment or even death itself, nothing can bring her any more torture than that she has passed through. For the last ten years, at least, she has lived in an inferno of suspicion, with her ears to cracks and her eyes to keyholes, spying, listening, trying to find out what her husband said and did in his office; trying to discover where he went when away from home, obsessed with a jealousy that tortured her night and day and that was never appeased.

Mrs. Carman is a beautiful, refined woman, a woman of great dignity and reticence. It must have humbled her pride into the dust to consecrate to the secret espionage that she kept continually upon her husband. She has a New England conscience, and it must have damned her in her own sight when she installed the dictograph in her husband's office, and thus violated the secrecy of the physician's office that is as sacred as the secrecy of the confessional.

BOUND TO PITY HER.

But she was driven on by her own mad jealousy into doing the things her soul abhorred, and when we think of all the grinding torments that she must have suffered we are bound to pity her, even if we cannot condone her weakness.

But what of the man who fed the fires of her jealousy by his conduct? What of the frivolous women who fanned the flames of her suspicions by their flirtations with him?

The jealous wife is not going to be the only one who is going to be punished in this case. Before it is over the husband will have paid to the last farthing the price of his folly, and the silly women who thought it fun to coquette with a married man will find that their gay romance has suddenly turned to grim tragedy.

Gossip already has begun to whisper certain names. Already a number of dainty petticoats, before this considered spotless, have been splashed with mud, and more than one woman's fare paled with fear when the manager of the dictagraph company said that Mrs. Carman had informed him that she kept a record of all the conversations that she overheard in her husband's office.

So the moral of this story is not wholly for jealous wives. It is also for gay husbands and giddy women.

In one of Cable's Creole stories there is a little priest who always said "God forgive you and me, my brother, for this man's sin," when he hears of a crime that has been committed. That might well be the prayer of every husband with a jealous wife, for back of the wife's jealousy there is pretty sure to be a justifying cause. You never hear of the wife of a man who passes his evenings at home, who takes his wife along with him when he goes out to enjoy himself, and who spends his earnings on his own family, falling a victim to the green-eyed monster.

HOW CAN YOU BLAME HER?

How can you blame a wife for being jealous when her husband regards his home as only a place to discard his soiled clothes and work off his real temper, when a husband sends orchids to actresses, and begrudges the price of the baby's milk; when he is all compliments to other women and all "knocks" to his wife; when he quotes poetry to other women, and scarcely grunts in answer to his wife's questions?

There are tens of thousands of such men, men who regard marriage as a tie that binds only on women, and who feel that they have perfect liberty in romantic affairs with any pretty and attractive woman that crosses their path. Indeed, they hold themselves even freer than bachelors, since, by announcing that they are married and that there is a woman in the background who has legal possession of their names and pocketbooks, they are protected from any danger from breach of promise suits, and cannot be expected to end a flirtation with matrimony.

The married man flirt is one of the most common and contemptible figures in society, for he wrongs two women, the woman he is betraying and the woman he is playing with. It is the side-stepping husband who is responsible for the jealous wife. We have been in the habit, taught by French farces, to look upon the fat, middle-aged wife who is trying to keep up with her gay rounder of a husband as a figure of fun. Surely in reality there is no more pathetic creature on earth than the wife who knows that her charms have faded, her beauty gone, and that her husband has left her for younger and fairer and gayer women. And certainly there is no more refined form of cruelty than that practiced by the man who rewards a wife's faithful devotion by indulging in affairs that incite jealousy in her bosom.

THE BOAST OF CONQUEST.

Men talk about platonic friendships and innocent gallantries, but nothing is innocent or harmless that brings unmerited suffering on another.

If married men are only too often flirtatious, they do not have to look far to find women only too willing to play the game of hearts with them. Indeed, there are many women who consider it more exciting to take a man away from his wife than to capture one who is unattached, and who openly boast of such conquests.

The heart of such a woman must be as hard as rock. The souls of her must be as cruel as those of women who turned down their thumbs in ancient days when helpless maidens were thrown into the arena for wild beasts to tear to pieces, for by such an act knows what another Woman suffers when she sees the wife she loves, the man who is all-in-all to her, her young lover and her children's father, taken from her?

The jealous wife may be a tragically grotesque figure, but she is also an avenging figure. In her hand she carries disgrace and divorce, and sometimes death, and he shall say that those who have tortured her do not deserve the punishment they receive?

That is the lesson of the Carman case, that the folly of the jealous wife is matched by the folly of the flirtatious husband and his foolish women companions. They also shall reap as they have sowed.

SEEK WOMAN WHO LOVED DR. CARMAN

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 11.—Friends of Mrs. Frederick Carman, who today investigating a report that a Freeport woman so infatuated with Dr. Edwin Carman that she drew a will in which she bequeathed $5,000 to him, recently cancelled the legacy and may have been the woman who fired the shot that killed Mrs. Louie Bailey.

Dr. Carman was asked about the story as he was leaving his home carrying a big bouquet of nasturtiums and carnations to his wife in the Mineola jail. He referred inquiries to George M. Levy, Mrs. Carman's counsel, who replied:

"I will neither affirm nor deny it."

One of the "mysterious" individuals named whom have been mentioned as threatening the life of Dr. Carman was eliminated as a factor in the Bailey mystery, when Mrs. Horace Evans, wife of a physician who was instrumental in having Dr. Carman dismissed from the Board of Health of Freeport, declared that she was the woman who tried to attack Dr. Carman at the South Shora Yacht Club a year or two ago.

Dr. Evans, formerly professor of anatomy at Cornell University, came to Freeport and began to practice medicine five years ago. As a result of the conditions he found in Freeport he complained to the State Board of Health and Dr. Carman was let out.

Since then, Dr. Evans declares, he has been persecuted by the "Freeport ring," has twice been beaten and his telephone and mail have been tampered with.

Mrs. Evans, his wife, who is an artist, said:

"There need be no further search for the 'mysterious woman' who threatened Dr. Carman at the South Shore Yacht Club, for I am the woman. When I saw Dr. Carman there and thought of all the indignities that have been heaped upon us I ran for him and meant to seize him by the neck.

"He ran for a block and hid behind some oil cans. My friends stopped me and calmed me. I was so angry that I do not remember what I said, but if I had reached him I might have injured him.

"I have kept silent because I did not want to be involved in this mess of Dr. Carman, although I had no thought of injuring Dr. Carman, and I certainly did not shoot at him nor do any shooting."

W. J. BURNS ADVISES SCALES TO DETERMINE DEATH BULLET FACTS

FREEPORT, L. I., July 11.—"The calibre of the bullet that caused the death of Mrs. Bailey should be easily established with the aid of a fine pair of scales," said William J. Burns today. A 22-calibre automatic pistol was found in a drawer in the home of Dr. Edwin Carman shortly after the killing. Dr. Carman admitted ownership of the revolver.

If the authorities can establish that the killing bullet was fired from a 32-calibre weapon, the revolver owned by Dr. Carman will become of great importance in their eyes.

All automatic pistols use cartridges loaded with so-called steel-jacketed projectiles. Few of the jackets really are of steel. In most instances the bases are encased in brass.

The differences in weight between bullets of different calibres are not marked that a shattered projectile from a 22-calibre revolver, for instance, would not be mistaken for one from a pistol of 32 or 38-calibre.

Provided the bullet which killed Mrs. Bailey was steel-jacketed and the jacket was entirely missing, the length and grains of powder used could be easily established and the calibre is known. It is not impossible that the make of the gun could be determined by the bullet. Most of the automobiles will carry only ammunition made by the manufacturers of a particular weapon.

THREE REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPHIC STUDIES OF MRS. FLORENCE CARMAN

CHILD IS PATHETIC FIGURE IN TRAGEDY

By CONSTANCE WILLIAMS.

That strange clinic of the human soul, the courtroom, never brought to light a more touching or affecting picture than was painted in the story of little Elizabeth Carman, who testified in the inquest that resulted in her mother's arrest for murder.

The little nine-year-old girl is a true mirror of all childhood, in the perfect simplicity of her answers, and in her perfect confidence in her mother. Her story of what she did on that evening when black crime was afoot only a few yards from where she sat, is a chapter out of the great mysterious life of childhood which most of us forget as we grow older.

WOMAN AND A BOY.

She sat on the straight chair, well forward on the edge of her seat, her chubby little legs a-swinging, her hands on the chair arms, her bright eyes flashing around the room. She was alive with interest in her surroundings, and with desire to do well her part in these mysterious proceedings.

Had she seen any patients in her father's office that night? Yes, there was a woman and a little boy. No, she didn't know who the little boy was, though she had seen him in school. Her grandma and her aunt, she said, were on the front veranda. Her mother went upstairs.

There was no hesitation about her answers. Her tone seemed to imply that she told only things everybody knew—that she was surprised they should be interested in such trivialities.

"And you went outdoors?" Yes, in the gathering dusk, she wandered out into the lawn about her father's house. It was little dark out there for play. What should she do? She thought of her pistol. She was supposed to practice every day, for so long a time. She had done her practicing that day, but it would be nice to do more. It is a curious thing that musical children so often choose for their practicing the moment their father, after a day's work, is trying to rest in the next room; or when a mother with a headache is trying for peace and quiet above stairs.

LIGHT IN THE ROOM.

So she came in and there was a light in the room and she started to practice—her short legs only reaching the pedals when she slipped forward half off the stool—her fat little fingers straining desperately for the full octave of the chords.

The lady and the little boy, she noticed, were still in the reception room.

And then, just as one might have expected, her mother called down that she must stop practicing. It was always the way—just when you were doing what people wanted you to do —trying to be a good girl. Mother called for her to stop practicing.

At this testimony, knowing glances shot about the court room; for experts have testified that the dictagraph will not work when a piano is being played in the house, and the State claims Mrs. Carman was listening at that moment at the dictagraph that connected with her husband's office.

TOLD HER TO STOP.

But Bessie knew nothing of all this—knew nothing of how her words might be twisted to her mother's injury. Yes, mamma told her to stop playing.

"And what did you do?" Then came the very picture of a child. Here she had started playing the piano, just to do something to spend the time, and now she mustn't play. She wandered disconsolately into the room. It was dark in there, or almost so. There was a big rocking chair by the window. The tiny figure clambered into the rocking chair and was lost in its depths, and the child's indignation that she might not "practice" turned at last to joy in life; and her thoughts moved more slowly, and lifted from the dull old earth of grownups and few among dreams, and she saw—the strange and glorious visions of childhood which older folk can never know.

A little after 8 she woke up and saw her mother in her kimono.

Thus ran her testimony—the simple, human picture of an hour in a little child's life—wondering about the lady—practicing on the piano—driven there to sit and dream in the big chair—and then the shot that tumbled her little world about her ears.

Mrs. Carman, the accused murderess, is a well-proportioned woman, statesque and beautiful. She is of medium height, blonde hair and beautiful blue eyes. Her forehead is wide and clear, her chin rounded but firm, her lips well shaped and indicative of a strong and tempestuous personality. She has the full throat of a woman of strong passions, and the level eyes of a woman of culture and refinement.

MRS. BAILEY'S MOTHER SCORES AUTHORITIES

Here is the bitter denunciation of the manner in which the investigation of the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, shot down in the private office of Dr. Edwin Carman of Freeport, L. I., has been handled, as voiced by Mrs. Jennie Durgeon, mother of the slain woman:

"It is peculiar the way the authorities at Freeport are acting in this matter. It does not seem to me as if they really want to get the murderer of my daughter.

"LIKE AMATEUR DETECTIVES."

"They are acting more like a lot of amateur detectives than like county officials. In place of concentrating their energies along one line, they are running and jumping all around in a veritable maze of clews. Personally, I feel confident that the bullet which killed my daughter was not meant for her, but for Dr. Carman. Why don't they make him disclose the names of all the persons in his office at the time of the murder?

"I am sure he has them, and I'm sure he could throw light on the entire subject.

"In the first place, why don't they make Dr. Carman explain why he delayed forty-five minutes before even notifying the police a murder had been committed? What was his reason?

"Then, why did they allow Dr. Carman to go about entirely free and unaccompanied after the murder? What wasn't he detained as a material witness?

"Why did they allow him to leave his house the morning after the murder entirely unaccompanied? Where did he go? He might easily have taken the revolver—the weapon they can't find now—with him and thrown it either in the reservoirs, the marsh land or the creek near his home. You know there is a creek within half a mile of his home, and marshland and reservoirs within a mile of it.

"Let them search these places and they may find the gun—although it is now either buried beneath many feet of water or sunk several feet in the marsh.

LOST FINGER PRINTS.

"Then again, why don't the authorities allow the crowds to mass over the Carman lawn, handle the broken window, remove the glass and handle the screen—thereby removing all possibility of securing telltale finger prints?

"All these things tend to show me that the authorities have either been lax in their duties in not doing their duty, or that they are not keen to do their duty.

"I leave it to the public to decide which was the case."

WILLIAMS TELLS REAL STORY OF ALBANIA

In response to a cablegram asking for a statement of the situation which led him to denounce the "murderous government" of Prince Wied of Albania, the Boston AMERICAN has received the following:

By GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS,
Recently Removed by President Wilson as American Minister to Greece and Montenegro.

Special Cable to Boston American.

ATHENS, July 11.—As the Herald was the first American editor to offer the columns of his newspaper to help free a people that nation, I accept the offer to make a statement of the case.

I regret more than I can express the European press is in a conspiracy of silence. Not a line, aside from Germanic Italy and Austria suppressors, my articles, have appeared featuring the falsehood that I resigned at the request of President Wilson.

Even the London Times joins in this game. These papers publish columns on the murder of Prince Franz Ferdinand of Austria, while they refuse to expose the murder of an innocent people by a German Prince supported by Europe.

Hence I gladly appeal to the liberty-loving people of America.

Albania is a country of mountains and fertile valleys on the Adriatic sea. Its people are shepherds and farmers, simple and honest. They are largely Mohammedan, though, even in religion, they long ago broke loose from Turkish control. There are Catholic Christians in the north, Greek Christians in the south, wherein Epirus, of Greek blood, is dominant.

When at the end of the Graeco-Turkish war the six Great Powers undertook delimitation of the conquered territory, Albania was carved out from Montenegro to the Greek line. The London accord declared Albania to be a principality whose sovereignty and neutrality was guaranteed by the six Great Powers.

The controlling influences in this arrangement were Italy and Austria, which wished to keep Servia and Greece from Adriatic ports.

A Commission of Internation control, generally called C. I. C., consisting of consuls from the six Great Powers, was created to establish a government and was entrusted to control administrative and financial affairs. These officers were empowered to control the gendarmerie or police force.

FARCE OF GOVERNMENT.

The Powers searched for a Prince and finally fixed upon one Wied, a German major of Uhlans, related to the German Roumanian royalty. Through its alliance with Roumania the Greek government was induced to pledge its influence to support Wied.

Then began a farce of government which would be the funniest exhibition of international incompetency in the history of diplomacy had it not been turned into tragedy.

Essad Pasha, a local chieftain, went to Germany and ostentatiously tendered the rule of Albania to Wied. He had the same right to present Albania to Wied that the Mayor of Schenectady would have to dispose of New York State.

Wied came to Valona or Avolan, a Albanian seaport, and demanded a reception of great pomp. The C. I. C. made preparations but was promptly snubbed by the Prince's chamberlain. The Prince treated the C. I. C. with contempt and appointed a ministry consisting of landlords, pashas and beys.

Three points should be noted here. First, the people of Albania were not all consulted in the matter; second, the prince and the C. I. C. brought no constitution with them; third, the six great powers were invading a nation without any right except that of armed force. Yet they furnished no soldiers. The allied Balkan States had driven out the Turks, but had not conquered the Albanians.

The Prince took a royal title, "His Majesty, the King."

When the curtain was rung up there was a king without power, territory or subjects, a commission with the purse strings, officers without soldiers.

A conspiracy was uncovered and the Prince left Valona for Durazzo, another port to the north.

There were bickerings, hatreds, recriminations without and within the C. I. C. court and ministry.

ESSAD IS BANISHED.

General Essad plotted a coup d'etat, was seized and shipped to Italy.

The people meanwhile were not idle.

In the south Epirotes declared its independence with Mr. Zographine President. Insurgent forces bottled up the Prince at Durazzo.

REFUSED TO RECEIVE HIM.

But the worst mischief is out at Pandora's box, where Italy and Austria, each playing a deep or shallow game to outwit each other. All Powers had warships in the harbor to protect the Prince, while Austria and Italy each wanted to grab the whole country and determined that the other should have none of it.

Under these conditions I could not make head or tail out of the business. There were reports and counter reports. Nobody knew the truth.

At this stage it occurred to me that an unprejudiced witness might be of value. I asked my government to give me power to go to Epirus, observe conditions, report, and also communicate with the C. I. C.

Power was granted me. I went to Argyocastro, the capital seat of the provisional authority. The provisional ministry had arranged an agreement or protocol with the C. I. C. whereby Epirus was to be delivered over to the allied governments.

Misunderstandings had arisen on the protocol. I possessed ...ff of the facts and promised ...phos that I would try to ... the differences, even ... of ... opposed the protocol as a mere trick to get possession of Epirus without cost.

I also went into the Albanian lines under military escort, investigated the massacre of Mohammedans by Epirot soldiery at Koritza, went to Durazzo confident I could be very helpful in securing an understanding which would stop bloodshed at Epirus.

On arriving I learned from one of the members that the C. I. C. wouldn't receive me. I don't know why to this day. It was evident, of course, that the commission was playing fast and loose with Zographino. Else it would have welcomed me.

Thereupon I proceeded to size up the situation. Everybody told me the facts confidentially. I then came to realize that the whole affair from the six Great Powers down to the ministers, was a mass of hypocrisy, humbug and dishonesty.

I couldn't conceive how the whole world, including myself, had been deluded into the idea that the Wied government was anything but a farce.

But there was one dreadful reality. Beyond my chamber windows on a marsh fusillades of musketry and booming cannon greeted my ears. Men were dying before my eyes. The men on both sides were all Albanians.

I found that Prince Wied, to protect himself against the Moslem insurgents, had brought down 2,000 Christians from the North. He was also fighting the Christians of Epirus with Moslems of Valona. He had set brother against brother that he might have the title as ruler.

He was hiding in the palace protected by marines and didn't dare even to review his troops before battle.

HEART SICKENED AT SIGHT.

My heart sickened at the shedding of the blood of Albanians that this silly dog fancier might wear a crown. I made up my mind to devote myself to wrecking his usurpation. I went to Valona, stirred up people to declare their independence, took means to reach the contending forces and show them their folly, but cheering each other that all might be enslaved.

I began my work to get the various sections of Albanians to unite in Catonal and to create a federation for mutual defence.

I have some splendid helpers whose work I shall disclose when further advanced.

In Athens I issued a broadside attacking the whole scheme. All Greece responded with enthusiasm.

I was welcomed as the founder of a new diplomacy of freedom.

Even Epirote, president, declared if Epirus got her freedom it would be due to the American Minister.

Military officers offered me their fealty. I am in communication with insurgents and Christians who fought for Weid at Durazzo.

This very day the Epirote Assembly meets to adopt or reject the Corfu arrangement, to which I am opposed. It will be defeated or postponed.

Of course, I had to resign as Minister from the United States, for I couldn't plot against the six Great Powers of Europe and hold my place.

A defenceless nation is being attacked by a lot of ravenous monarchical wolves. Thanks to my experience in United States politics I am a good wolf-hunter. Let all my well-wishers rejoice at this.

A high privilege has fallen to me. We glory in the support which came from the United States when Greece and Poland were struggling for liberty.

Is this to be a Greece or a Poland? We shall see.

STORSTAD MEN BLAMED FOR EMPRESS WRECK

QUEBEC, July 11.—The commission of inquiry investigated the shipwreck of the steamer Empress of Ireland in the St. Lawrence on May 29, with a loss of more than one thousand lives, announced this session today, holding that the officers of the Storstad, which collided with the Empress of Ireland, was responsible for the disaster. The report exonerates the officers of the Empress and is unanimous.

The Storstad is responsible for the accident because she changed her course, the finding being borne by Third Officer Lindquist when the Empress was sighted.

It is practically certain that some of the lifeboats of the Empress were not owned at the time of the collision.

First Officer Tuftener of the Storstad and Third Officer Lundquist must face the blame for the disaster. Criticism will be directed at Tuftener for not calling Captain Andersen of the Storstad when fog came on.

The court held that Captain H. G. Kennedy and the crew of the Empress had done their duty.

The commissioners suggested that a new rule be adopted compelling ships to close their bulkheads when fog comes on and also at night, that different stations be established for the ships to take on and leave off pilots and that more life rafts be provided.

Whipple to File New Haven Stockholders' Suit Next Week

Sherman L. Whipple, on behalf of the stockholders of the New Haven Railroad, will file next week a suit for $125,000,000, or thereabouts—against the New Haven directors and the New Haven as a corporation.

The object of the suit is to compel New Haven directors—J. Pierpont Morgan, William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Ledyard and others—to make restitution for the vast sums alleged to have been expended improvidently and illegally in the purchase of the Boston & Maine, the trolleys and steamships.

NEW COUNTRY CLUB PLANNED BY BOSTON MEN

A. C. Hatchesky, Edwin J. Dreyfus and Edward S. Goulston of Boston and Brookline have bought "Kernwood," the fine old Peabody estate on the Danvers River in North Salem for $50,000.

The purchasers and their associates will spend $50,000 this Summer refitting the mansion for a country clubhouse and laying out a golf course and other improvements.

A. C. Hatchesky is president of the United States Trust Company of this city; Edwin J. Dreyfus is of the firm of Jacob Dreyfus & Son; Edward S. Goulston is senior member of Goulston & Storrs, attorneys.

"Kernwood" is one of the best known country estates this side of New York. It dates back to Salem's early days and has been famous for its hospitality and brilliant entertainment.

Endicott Peabody, whose heirs have made this sale, was one of the early settlers of Salem, and his descendants have figured largely in the affairs of the city and State.

Cotuit Wife Sues Husband for Divorce

Mrs. Luella C. Nutting of Cotuit filed suit for divorce in Dedham today from her husband, Shirley S. Nutting of Quincy. She claims desertion since 1906. They were married in Quincy in 1897. W. H. Mitchell is her attorney.

One Can Have A Good Time At Table

without the usual cup of coffee, and feel a whole lot better between meals, too—free from that old "off color feeling"—biliousness, indigestion, nervousness and heart flutter.

The secret is

POSTUM

—instead of coffee.

Try the change for a couple of weeks and observe two noticeable things:

You won't miss the old beverage, for Postum tastes much like rare old Java.

Further, there's the brisk, alert feeling—free from the logyness of a lazy liver and disturbed digestion.

Thousands of people have made the change and know

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—needs no boiling. A teaspoonful of the soluble powder stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delightful beverage instantly. Add cream and sugar to taste. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

Grocers everywhere sell POSTUM.

Count Your Blessings

Would you be willing to go back to the standards of living that prevailed in 1812?

In spite of all the praise of "the good old days," would you be content to give up the many conveniences we have gained in the past century?

Former generations knew nothing of the luxuries of modern travel, with its observation cars, individual lights in Pullman berths, phonograph recitals, rich appointments, home-like comforts and special safety devices, with which the modern railway system surrounds its passengers.

The rural telephone now places the farmer in instant communication with the source of the latest market reports, and saves him many hours of precious time in the event of sickness or accident.

The introduction of the typewriter and adding machine has lightened the load and lengthened the day of the business office.

It was Advertising that first proclaimed the usefulness of these devices, that created an immediate and universal demand for them, that established a world-wide distribution which made them readily accessible to us all.

McCormick invented the reaper, and thereby made himself an everlasting benefactor of the farmer. But it was Advertising that carried the wonderful news with its far-reaching significance to the "man with the hoe."

You know what housework used to be. Realize what it is now, since the advent of sanitary plumbing fixtures, hot-water heating, vacuum cleaners and electric household appliances. Advertising has brought these things into your home. It has eliminated drudgery.

Advertising is service. Science, invention, commerce, are all indebted to its aid. It has raised the standard of living, elevated business ethics and put us within reach of more real comforts, more real blessings, than we ever enjoyed before.

CHANCE TO WIN PRIZE WATCHING WEBSTER FLIGHT

the AMERICAN will explain in full tomorrow—that is, in Sunday's AMERICAN. The contest will be described nowhere else. If you do not get tomorrow's AMERICAN you will not know what to do with a card when you get it. Therefore remember: YOU MUST BUY TOMORROW'S AMERICAN TO ENTER THIS CONTEST.

But the contest is really the smallest part of the attraction at Nantasket tomorrow. In the first place there is the beautiful ride down on the Nantasket steamboat Company's boats. It is a short hour's ride, but through the most beautiful waters of the New England coast. And the boats, the South Shore, Betty Alden, old Colony and Nantasket, are beautiful, trim, cool craft, that make you forget there is such a thing in the world as a climbing mercury.

WONDERFUL BOAT TRIP.

There are thousands of people in Boston who think a boat ride to Nantasket and back is as much of an outing as any one wants. They say it is the finest trip possible out of Boston. However, that may be, it is sure no one will ever take the trip without thoroughly enjoying it. No! You don't get out far enough to be seasick. You're in sheltered water all the way.

The boat ride—beyond a doubt worth the afternoon in itself—is only one feature of the day. At Nantasket—in Paragon Park—Manager George Dodge has arranged to present a special program. The full program of this entertainment you will find in to-morrow's AMERICAN also, and even without any special program, Paragon Park is an attraction worth while.

Then there is Nantasket Beach—that splendid, long, gentle, slope of cool, gray sand, inviting you to loll at ease, or to get into bathing things and plunge into the water, to emerge and stretch upon the sand again.

WEBSTER'S GREAT MACHINE.

And finally the mail home again in the boats. But while you are there will come the flights by Webster in his big plane.

The Burgess-Dunne is a new departure in aviation—differing from other flying machines in the shape of its planes and in other details. The planes, instead of being straight from tip to tip, are bent sharply in the middle, so that from where the aviator sits they look like wings like the barbs of a very blunt arrow. Incidentally, those planes are used cunningly to catch the wind in certain fashions at certain times, so that the Burgess-Dunne flying machine is that miracle of man's making, a stable aeroplane.

When man began to long to fly, he early found his greatest difficulty in the old, old problem of "keeping his balance." You all know what that means. When you were about six months old, and first practised sitting upright, you found "keeping your balance" a problem of utmost importance; and when in a few months more you began to walk, the problem was even more vital. Later still, as boys or girls, you tried walking on stilts, and again that pesky proposition of "keeping your balance" bothered you. Pretty soon you tried the bicycle, and again it was "keep your balance or you'll fall."

BALANCE HARD TO LEARN.

Well, when aeroplanes were first built in such fashion as to fly they were balanced by intricate mechanical devices, which required the aviator to be constantly alert, his nerves on edge, his eyes ahead, his senses tightened to meet any slight or billow of the various winds. When he failed, he never failed but once. The law of gravity rudely corrected his mistake.

Thus the highest problem of aviation, like the highest problem of life, has been one of "keeping your balance. And the Burgess-Dunne plane has solved that problem for flight, if not for the every day affairs of life.

It has solved the problem so well that those who know say an ordinary man in a Burgess-Dunne plane is perfectly safe from disaster so long as the plane itself does not collapse or so long as he tries no loop-the-loop.

Clifford Webster is so expert in the Burgess-Dunne that he looks his guiding levers and bridle hands to the air or clasps them behind his head while in flight with apparent perfect safety—and the machine rides as even as can be.

Come to Nantasket and see.

VACATION DAYS in the mountains go all too quickly amid the wealth of beautiful scenery and clear, bracing air—but in the evening, when you're tired from the long tramp over the hills, that's the time when you'll enjoy the news of the busy world below the clouds.

Have the Boston American follow you and read the news every day just as you do when you're back home. Fill in this blank—we'll do our part.

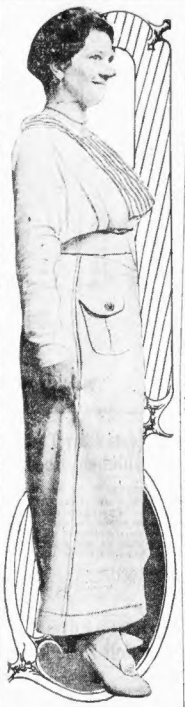
HOW to prevent the tango foot, Katie Hey posing to show the correct way for women tangoers to walk. This erect pose is in contrast to the slouch which throws the body forward.



TANGO MENACES WOMAN'S WALK

Look out for the Tango feet!

It may spoil your walking pose.

Society women who tango in Boston and other large cities have just had an inkling of this from their physicians.

Dr. A. L. Ray of the Illinois College of Orthopedics, who is attending the seventh annual Shoe and Leather Market Fair in Mechanics Building, says the tango is giving us the tango foot and upsetting the proper carriage in walking.

Dr. Ray declares the antidote to tangoitis is to practice daily walking.

"The tango foot is known by the fallen arch," declared Dr. Ray.

"I've seen many a good foot made flat by the constant use of the ball of the foot in dancing. People used to use the heel more than modern dancers would encourage. That is the chief objection to the tango—it makes too strenuous use of the ball of the foot.

"It might be said, too, that, unless women are using the right care in looking after their feet, they will soon be unfit to walk any distance.

"Few society people who do the modern dance to extremes walk as they should. Watch them on the street. They do not walk erect. They are getting the tango tendency to throw the body forward when they walk."

Do You Wear Shoes? Read On

"Charley" Rudd, Ohio agent of the Brockton Heel Company, is very lengthy. He knows how to spin out a yarn. You will see him dodging around corners at the big shoe fair after some old time customer. Charley's heart is big as his talk is continuous. He can always land a buyer.

MOXLEY BRINGS LEICESTER NEWS.

A. G. Moxley of Leicester, Eng., says English tanners are beginning to realize what Americans want in hides. "If you sell an American a mellow English hide, you get him every time," says Mr. Moxley. "We can't get our leather men in England to get so friendly as you Americans."

RANDELL TELLS OF NEW FASHIONS.

G. M. Randell of Boston knows more about fashions in women's shoes than any one else his age. Women will have short vamps in their next shoes, and buckles, he says. Women's shoes have come to stay, he says.

MISS STONE SAYS "BUY 12 PAIRS."

Miss Pearl Stone of New York is around the fair advancing the project for women to get shoes to match their gowns. The conventional black shoe must go, she says, and every woman should have at least a dozen pair of shoes to match her dresses.

"HARRY" POPULAR WITH FAIR VISITORS.

"Harry," of Matusow and Mershon of New York, has been putting precious stones in the heels of their shoes for women visitors. Emmanuel Blau, who is with him, is designing a new foot ornament that is a real gem in its way.

FELTER DEVISES NEW BABY'S SHOE.

W. B. Felter of Newark, N. J., is still thinking how baby's feet can be made beautiful. Now babies are going to have a more beautiful shoe than ever. They are going to have a wide instep strap, ornamented with a shining buckle that baby will want to get into its mouth.

SIMON FAVORS STATE EXAMINATIONS.

"Joe" Simon of Nashua, N. H., is around pleading that shoemen should pass a State examination before they sell shoes. What Joe wants is that every one shall get a shoe that fits and he thinks that salesmen in some stores are selling too small shoes.

"DR." BROWN TO WRITE BOOK.

"Dr." Charles Henry Brown of E. T. Wright Co., Rockland, has studied the human foot—ten years—and he is now about to write a book telling what kind of shoes to wear to forget all your troubles.

MANDOT AGREES TO BATTLE IN GO AT ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

JOE MANDOT, the sensational New Orleans lightweight who defeated Johnny Dundee on the Fourth of July, will probably be seen in action in this city within a few weeks. Johnny Mealand, matchmaker of the Atlas A. A., yesterday mailed Mandot an offer to meet the winner of the Baldwin-Gallant fight, which will be staged at the Arena next Thursday evening. In case Mandot is willing today from Tommy Walsh, manager of the little Frenchman, he will be asked that he would like to be permitted to perform in this city and that he feels confident that he would be able to defeat either of the Baldwin-Gallant fighters.

Walsh would prefer to match Mandot with Baldwin or Gallant rather than the average Eastern lightweight, as both boys are of the same weight as Joe and are well known in California, where the majority of the ring champions who made their reputations in lightweights here would gain a lot of prestige on the Pacific Coast. Mandot would be in line for bouts with the leading men in his class.

GALLANT believes he will be the second of the sensational hitting boys with Mandot. He has been training at a Chelsea gymnasium for some time past and is in better condition than he was when the two met in Boston. Gallant is considered by New England lightweight experts to be defeating Eddie Murphy.

Alex McLean's protege is entering the old ballpark with the understanding that when they left the premises last night the latter had not been beaten at least a year and that Gallant claims he won the decision, but is willing to admit that he is entitled to at least a draw in each bout and that he considers Joe's margin Tuesday evening.

BALDWIN is preparing for the encounter on his farm at Lynnfield. He has been training at Lynnfield for three weeks and is in grand condition. Gallant is one boxer whom Matty is desirous of seeing perform in this city, and after today he said: "Gallant was formerly my amateur partner, and I know I have a real boxer with Alex McLean he has been coaching for a long time. Here and now I am declaring that he is my master. I defeated him by a narrow margin, but will have to be a narrow setback next Tuesday evening.

"GALLANT'S admirers claim he has improved at least forty per cent since he made his campaign on the Pacific Coast. That is to the fact that he recently easily defeated Eddie Murphy, while the latter was beaten by a year ago.

"I do not believe that Gallant is a better boxer today than he was a year ago. He won from Murphy because the latter has gone back, not because he himself has improved so much."

"I DO not know of any reason why I should worry over the outcome of the coming battle. I have defeated Willie Ritchie while in good condition, and I have also defeated Welsh one of the hardest men to beat in the game. I have met the best of the star men in the lightweight division, and after I get rid of Gallant next week I will again start after bouts with the leaders in the big lightweight division. I am the New England lightweight champion, and that will no longer be possessed by a Chelsea boxer."

ENGLISH boxing "fans" should witness another great ring battle when "Gunboat" Smith and Georges Carpentier clash in a ten-round bout in London next Thursday night. Smith has been made a favorite in the betting, but Carpentier's supporters think a hard fight for supremacy. Carpentier is a sterling boxer and he is also a good puncher as he proved when he knocked down Joe Jeannette in the first round of their recent bout.

THE writer believes that Smith will win, but the gunner will have his work cut out for him. Frank Klaus and Billy Papke both defeated Carpentier, but one must not forget that when the French boxer met them he lacked ring experience. He has improved a great deal during the past year and is really a veteran having the best of the white heavyweights extend themselves in order to beat him.

THERE must be something the matter with Battling Nelson's time writer, for the former lightweight champion has failed to challenge Freddy Welsh. The "Durable Dane" admits that he is a better fighter than either Willie Ritchie or Ad Wolgast, but he has yet to tell us where he rates the clever Welshman.

RED SOX HAVE CHANCE TO GAIN LOST GROUND

By NICK FLATLEY.

Today the Red Sox open up a series with Cleveland, the American League's islanders. They play five games with the relics of the Tribe, and now is another splendid opportunity open to them to get in the running. They appear as if they have another bout in this busy season.

Today they are a half game closer to the front than they were yesterday, the Athletics and the Tigers engaged in a slashing eleven-inning battle at Detroit, which finally ended with the Mackmen and Red Sox, who finally managed to get through defeating Callahan's pet up a bit closer.

The White Sox naturally fell back a game, as did also the St. Louis Browns, who faded before the well-known bender of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

If the Red Sox had come through for the past week with the smash and clout they had shown up for most of the season, they would be romping right at the leader's heels.

Last Thursday, when the traveling Boston tribe hit Washington, they had won 37 and lost 32. The figures for the leading Macsmen were 39 and 28 lost.

Since, the Red Sox have played nine games and won three of them. The pacemakers have likewise played nine, winning five, dropping three and engaging in one tie.

SHOULD BE SECOND.

Going at their normal clip the Landis outfit should have won six out of the nine. As a matter of fact they booted away at least three contests. Had they won the six they would now appear on the records with 40 wins and 25 defeats. Instead of the .608 figures at present on the date the Mackerels totals today are 41 and 31.

Had the Sox, as we observed, held the place that pennant hope should key a team up to, they would now be a small matter of 2½ games back of the leaders, instead of the margin of 5½ which at present separates the two.

Tackling the tailenders with such a slight lead to hammer down, they should now be severely leaded with new fresh. But the entirely unexpected slump in the disastrous Chicago series put the crimp in it.

However, a clean-up of the Naps should help a whole lot. It should help the best of the white heavyweights extend themselves in order to beat him.

THERE must be something the matter with Battling Nelson's time writer, for the former lightweight champion has failed to challenge Freddy Welsh. The "Durable Dane" admits that he is a better fighter than either Willie Ritchie or Ad Wolgast, but he has yet to tell us where he rates the clever Welshman.

TRACK AND FIELD NOTES

By FRED HOEY

Sport pages are that the best time to run for both the 220 yard dash and the 220 yard hurdles is 22 seconds flat, long-legged type. The short hurdler is very apt to trip and fall, and the short sprinter is apt to stiffen his stride. He must, instead of being a short, snappy sprinter, be a long, smooth one. Take the case of Bob Simpson, the short, snappy sprinter of the Boston A. A. He thought it to a decided advantage to be short and snappy in speed and quickness of stride. It looks more than a coming sprinter, but he has developed into a long, smooth sprinter and one of the fastest runners of the last decade.

Arthur Duffey was a great sprinter in his day, but he was not built for the 220 yard dash. Some seem that he was one of the best long sprints and that he was built for the 100 yard dash, and that he was built for the 220 yard dash, as well as the 100 yard dash. He carefully trained for the 220 yard dash, but he was not built for it. He was built to win and to run long-distance races, but he was not built for the 220 yard dash. He was built to run long-distance races, but he was not built for the 220 yard dash. He was built to run long-distance races, but he was not built for the 220 yard dash.

It takes as if Billy Queal will be seen in a few on a fifteen-mile race here this Summer. Efforts are now being made to have Danny Duffy, the late amateur and marathon star, meet the New Yorker.

It is almost a certainty that Jack Mackey will be asked by the American Olympic committee to train the team from this country for the Berlin meet. A college coach, as a rule, devotes track and field men from green material, while a club coach has the benefit of the services of collegians already finished when signed for a club. Mackey has developed Duffy, Bob Simpson, Johnny Mack, Kerns, Bob Fersch, Dan Carey, Harry Hillman, Jack Keane and other college coaches in looking over the field of material with a view to selecting the best.

Willard "Bill" Gallagher of Dorchester, now touring Europe, made a best mark from Algiers to Paris, a distance of 1,500 miles, in 1,000 miles. He has received a number of offers to make an exhibition trip to the United States, but he has declined them all. He is now in Paris, and will make an effort to get to the Olympic games.

Lemon Robertson, the Irish-American A. C. distance man, has recently rounded into form at Holyoke trots, for the next month he will be in a very strong position. There is a possibility that he may be entered in the Olympic games, but he is looking to scoring victories to keep a favorite with the fans. Robertson has been one of the best all-around men in the country for the past few years, and he is a favorite with the fans. He is a favorite with the fans. He is a favorite with the fans. He is a favorite with the fans.

The Amateur Association of the Amateur Order of United Workmen will hold a field day and games on Saturday, July 13, at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury. As an additional attraction this year open amateur events will be held, consisting of 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, one mile run, three-mile run (20-foot limit) and running high jump. The first prize will be a handsome gold watch; second prize a gold medal in form of a Greek shield, and third prize a gold medal. Entries close July 11 with Harry C. Swanson, 34 South Walter street, Roxbury.

TRIO OF STAR RACES ON CARD AT BEACH OVAL

RACING PROGRAM.

Motor-paced race, thirty miles—Moran, Walthour, Carman, Mitten.

Tandem races—South Boston vs. Everett, Logan and McFarland vs. Connolly and Rollins.

Special sprint match—Mike the Barber and Silvio Pecci.

Two-mile amateur handicap—Australian pursuit race for professionals, five-mile open for amateurs, one-mile invitation for amateurs and one-mile professional.

Bobby Walthour, holder of three-mode-paced records, meets Clarence Carman, Jimmy Moran and Worth Mitten in a thirty-mile motor-paced race at the Revere cycle track tonight.

Another feature of the card tonight will be a tandem race between the teams of Logan-McFarland and Connolly-Rollins.

The first race of this kind at the beach oval was ridden on last Tuesday night, and proved very popular with the "fans."

The four men who will ride are thoroughly experienced in this style of riding, and can be depended upon to put up a fast race.

Tonight will also see the riding of a match sprint race between Mike the Barber and Silvio Pecci. Both are considered fast, but the latter believes he is Pecci's superior over the short distance.

In addition to these three events the usual list of amateur and professional events will be run off.

Walthour is tackling a fast trio in the motor-paced race tonight, and he is certain to have his hands full in holding them off.

American Athletes Beat Foreign Stars

COPENHAGEN, July 11.—The American athletes won in several of the finals in the games at the Stadion against representatives of Denmark, Germany, Sweden and Finland.

Homer Baker, New York Athletic Club, won the 400 metres race in 52 3-10 seconds; W. M. Ofer, Jr., captured the 100 metres dash in 10 2-5 seconds; J. C. Patterson, University of Pennsylvania, won the 200 metres in 22 2-5 seconds and the 100 metres in 21 1-10 seconds; Ofer won the high jump with 1.82 metres (5 ft. 11½ in.).

The one mile relay race, teams of five men, was won by the Americans in 4 minutes 35 seconds.

Hamilton vs. Hazen Meet in Golf Finals

HOT SPRINGS, Va., July 11.—Good golf featured the semi-final rounds in the four chief flights and four consolation divisions in the Advertisers' tourney.

L. J. Hamilton, national, and J. J. Hazen, the 1913 champion, remain for the thirty-six-hole championship final today. Both won their matches Tuesday in four rounds yesterday and a close final is anticipated.

Miss Jane E. Lloyd, Oshmont, won the women's championship, defeating Mrs. A. S. Higgins, St. Andrews, 3 up.

Mrs. T. A. Moran won the consolation handicap and Mrs. J. C. Mitchell, Philadelphia, took second prize.

Hi Myers Bought by Brooklyn Club

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 11.—The Brooklyn National League club has announced the purchase of Outfielder Hi Myers of the Newark International League club to take the place of Dalton.

Brooklyn has sold Tex Erwin to Newark. He will play first base, and Holmquist, the present first baseman, will pitch and act as utility outfielder.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

JIMMY CALLAHAN, manager of the White Sox, believes that the Red Sox drew a star when they secured the services of Ruth, the left-handed pitcher from Baltimore.

"I saw him work in a double-header at Newark on a Sunday in white ages," said Callahan. "The Baltimore team got a good lead of eight runs, but in the fourth inning the Newark team got a lot on two of Ruth so Dunn took him out.

"However, in the second game of the double-header, Ruth went in the box again and pitched a one-hit game against the Newarks. He looked very classy. Ball players who know his work say he is a fine ball player aside from his great ability as a pitcher.

"I would have been after him for the White Sox even if I am well fixed for pitchers and, under the circumstances, did not feel like asking Comiskey to pay the big money that Dunn asked for Ruth."

RANKIN Johnson was soaked on the fifth inning of yesterday's game. He tried to come back, but after tossing a couple of balls found that the injury to his elbow was more severe than he thought. He therefore retired in favor of Hugh Bedient, who finished in grand style.

The injury to Johnson further cripples Carrigan's pitching staff. Fortunately Ruth and Shore are due from Baltimore today and these first class men will relieve the situation. It is expected that Joe Wood will be ready to work in a few days and Foster ought to come around soon.

ARMANDO MARSANS, the Cuban kangaroo, owns a big cigar plant in Cuba. This Spring while the Cincinnati Reds were in camp a contract with a company in Cincinnati to handle the Armando Marsans cigar, made by the players, each cigar bearing a bright red band with a picture of Marsans on it.

The company ordered 5,000 of them, and began to advertise the brand before they arrived. The cigars reached Cincinnati the day after the Cuban jumped his contract. Now the smokes are a drug on the Cincinnati market. No one in Cincinnati, who tells the story puts it, "You might as well try to sell a cigar bearing a brand with the picture of Benedict Arnold on it."

FINES in the Federal League seem to be based on the sliding scale with the revision downward. At 5 o'clock Monday morning it was stated officially that George Stovall had been fined $500 for insubordination. At 5 p. m. on the same day the fine had shrunk to $250, and now we have it on good authority that George was really fined fifty fish. Fine!

IF President Gilmore of the Federal League is determined to have a post-season series in his organization he might arrange for games between the pennant winners and a team made up of the men who have been put out of the game all Summer by process of injunction.

THE Feds put the Baltimore International League club "on the fritz"—there is no doubt about that. Baltimore fans refused to patronize Jack Dunn's team of high priced ball players, and to save his baron Dunn has been forced to dispose of his best men.

In addition to selling Ruth, Shores and Egan to the Red Sox for upward of $25,000, he disposed of Pree to the Yankees and turned over Derrick and Twombly to the Cincinnati Reds, and it would not be surprising to learn that the Athletics had landed Midkiff and Ball.

As a result of these sales Dunn will be able to tank more than $60,000 while the Baltimore "fans" will keep on rooting for the Federal League. Of course, Dunn will weaken his great team and the International League will suffer, as Baltimore will lose its attractiveness as a drawing card. Of course, also, the Feds will not gain anything except the satisfaction of knowing they have forced Dunn to ruin his team.

ALL the Giants have to do now-adays is to hit the railroad tracks and Jame Rumor does the rest. Manager McGraw says that probably his men are traded more times than any other men in baseball. The funny part of it is McGraw himself never knows about the trades.

The "Little Napoleon" spiked the rumor that Murray and Snodgrass would be traded for Bates, Hoblitzell and Maranon of the Boston Nationals by saying: "Just another feeble piece of news."

Flaherty Makes Big Shift in Lynn Team

Several changes have been made by Manager Flaherty in the personnel of the Lynn New England League Club. "Cottontop" Johnson, a pitcher, who was secured from the Memphis club several weeks ago, was turned back to that team. Robinson, who has played left field since the season opened, was displaced by Merrill, secured from the Portland Club. Merrigan, a Hudson lad, who has been playing first for the General Electric team in the Manufacturers' League, has been taken on for a tryout by Manager Flaherty.

RITCHIE STARTS ON SHORT TOUR OF CONTINENT

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 11.—Willie Ritchie starts today for a trip to Paris and Germany and has booked passage home on the Vaterland sailing from Hamburg on July 23.

He hopes to arrange matches with half a dozen of the most promising on the list of lightweights in America within the next nine months and would, if public opinion insisted, return and have another contest with Welsh.

Ritchie says he is sorry if any one misconstrued his astonishment at the referee's decision as "beef." He says he is perfectly willing to let the American newspaper men express their own opinions after they have seen the pictures.

Welsh is returning today to Carlsruhe, where he will spend a fortnight. After being lionized by his admirers he will then return to London to get some music hall money.

Tremendous interest is taken in the Smith-Carpentier contest for next Thursday night at the Olympia. The advance sale is now exceeding $45,000, against $21,000 for Welsh and Ritchie, and the management expects the gate to exceed $60,000.

Ilan McKettrick has closed verbally a deal for Frank Moran to meet Bombardier Wells for a purse of $25,000.

Young Ahearn, it is said, will sign to fight both Carpentier and Smith if the fight between this pair results in a draw, in which event the purse, instead of being $30,000, will be increased to $50,000 for both contests.

London certainly is fight mad.

IT is possible and easy —even for the man without early education— to get a comprehensive grasp of the world's History and of Human Thought.

Buckle's History of Civilization in England

Is unquestionably the most admirable and complete history of man's thought and of his REAL history that has ever been written. Carefully read this wonderful book. Will give any man the foundation of a complete education.

The Boston American has arranged for the publication of this work in four volumes complete for $1.

It has never previously sold for less than $4.00, but because of the tremendous quantities that we intend to distribute we have forced the producing cost down to its lowest point and we intend to distribute these books without regard to profit.

You can secure these books from your local dealer or you may order them direct from the Boston American Promotion Department, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston.

NAPS HERE FOR 4-GAME SERIES WITH RED SOX

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

The Cleveland Club got in today and it will tackle the Red Sox at Fenway Park this afternoon in the first of a four-game series. This club, which was fighting the Athletics for the pennant twelve months ago, is now in last place in the American League race.

It is to be supposed that the Red Sox will make a determined effort to win back some of the games they lost to the White Sox in the series just ended. It is necessary for them to keep a-humping else they cannot stay up in the race. Although they are in sixth place, only a few points separate them from the leaders. Six of the American League teams have percentage marks in the five hundreds.

Carrigan's pitching staff being somewhat shot to pieces, it may be necessary for him to work "Dutch" Leonard today instead of giving the left-hander another day of rest. "Dutch" warmed up toward the end of yesterday's game in order to relieve Bedient in case the latter well had against the White Sox.

It is expected that the three stars from Baltimore—Ruth, Shores and Egan—will arrive today. It is possible that Carrigan will ask Ruth or Shores to work right off the reel, but doubtless he would prefer to allow them a day or two to accustom themselves to their new surroundings.

There are 22 players in the Cleveland outfit, not including Manager Birmingham, who sometimes gets in the game in a pinch. No newspaper men are with the visitors, as the team has been going too badly to warrant the scribes accompanying it.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

PITCHERS RUTH AND SHORE AND Catcher Ben Egan, whom the Red Sox purchased from the Baltimore outfit, probably don the Boston uniform at Fenway Park this afternoon.

IF MARANVILLE COULD BIT AS WELL as he can field he would be good for 300 or 400 clubs. The Rabbit certainly shines in the Western league circuit.

JAY KIRKE, THE FORMER BRAVE, IS trying hard some his return to the big league club. Kirke is now a member of the Cleveland Naps.

WHAT AN IMPROVEMENT THE YANKEES do with one good hitter in the lineup. Ruth is filling the role in a most capable manner.

CALIFORNIA PROMOTERS ARE TRYING to secure two or three major league teams to make a trip to the coast during the coming week. The Detroit team is to one that is especially desired.

MANAGER JACK DUNN OF THE BALTIMORE Orioles intends to shift his schedule owing to the poor patronage at home. It is more some Sundays up for double headers as a transfer to other cities.

REBEL OAKES, MANAGER OF THE Pittsburgh Federals, is very much satisfied with his team and is making an effort to strengthen his quartet.

IT IS RUMORED THAT A PHILADELPHIA club Connie Mack may send Jimmy Walsh back to Baltimore. Pete Daly of the Orioles, who has a five-day agreement with Walsh on the world's series money, is hoping that Jimmy sticks with the Athletics.

ED MANNING, THE PITCHER RECENTLY sold to Rochester by the St. Louis Americans, may be out of the game for the season. He was injured as a result of having his foot run over by an automobile at Rochester Tuesday.

EDDIE STACK IS THE LEADING FEDERAL golden game pitcher on the Coast record. Stack has a clean record for the exhibition games this year.

ROBERT WALLACE IS NOT WITH THE Browns in their present Eastern trip. The infielder is still out of the game with an injured hand, and is not expected to do any playing for several weeks.

Women Watch Bouts at Pittsburgh Club for the First Time

PITTSBURGH, July 11.—For the first time in the history of the fight game in Pittsburgh there were women present at the Phil Brock and Mickey Rodgers bout, which resulted in a draw at the Motordrome.

Rodgers started off like a whirlwind, scoring two knockdowns in the first round.

Brock was still dazed in the second, but came back in the next and kept Rodgers busy thereafter, having a little the best of it toward the last.

Three Draw Awards at Cambridge Club

A draw in each case was the verdict in the three 10-round bouts at the University A. C., Cambridge.

In the opening bout Tommy Flanagan of Cambridge and Tommy Plank of New Haven went 10 rounds.

In the next bout, between Tiger Young of Maine and Tommy McFarland of the North End, the milling was fast and hard from the tap of the gong.

The last bout, which brought together Johnny Lustig of New York and Terry Brooks of this city, had the crowd on its feet a greater part of the time.

Frankie Mack Easy Winner Over Cassidy

NEW YORK, July 11.—Frankie Mack of Boston won a clean-cut verdict over Bull Cassidy of New York in ten fast rounds at the Polo S. here. In the first round Cassidy scored a knock-down with a wild swing, but the Bostonian was up in a jiffy and from then until the end the New Yorker was the recipient of a fine lacing.

Beecher Beats "Fitz."

NEW YORK, July 11.—Willie Beecher, the local lightweight, easily outpointed Eddie Fitzsimmons in the star bout at Brown's Rockaway A. A.

Ledoux Defeats Criqui.

PARIS, July 11.—Charles Ledoux, bantamweight champion of France, defeated Eugene Criqui, also of France, in the twelfth round, Criqui refusing to respond to the call of time.

Tennis Test Games Show Johnston and Williams at Best

NEW YORK, July 11.—Four of the tennis players engaged on the turf of the Country Club of Westchester in test matches for the selection of the Davis cup team have reached the semi-final round, Harold H. Hackett and R. Norris Williams, 2d, coupling the upper half and W. M. Johnston and Karl H. Behr in the lower section.

The contest which overshadowed all others was that in which Johnston of Columbia outpointed H. Lindley Murray, the newest of the stars from the Pacific coast, by the score of 7—5, 11—9.

Williams created great enthusiasm among the committee, Wrenn, Adee and Slocum, by a return to his international form.

He toyed with George M. Church, the Princeton star, and won at 6—1, 6—1, as he found all the openings. The semi-finals will be decided today.

Paleface Marksmen in Record Shoot

PORTLAND, July 11.—The Paleface Gun Club of Wellington broke the New England team total record at trap shooting at the Maine and New England State tournament here, breaking 481 targets. The score was made in competition with two Portland teams and the Goffstown team of New Hampshire.

C. S. Randall won the State championship from his brother, E. A. Randall, breaking ninety-seven out of one hundred.

Hjertberg Resigns as Swedish Coach

NEW YORK, July 11.—According to advices from Stockholm, Ernie Hjertberg, who has been handling the Swedish Olympic athletes has turned in his resignation as trainer. The cause of his action was a disagreement with his assistants. Efforts are now being made to have Hjertberg reconsider his action.

Rolland-Revoire Draw.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—Eddie Revoire and Jack Rolland, two local lights, drew in the opening of the outdoor boxing season of the Elephant A. A.

BRAVES-CUBS MEET IN FINAL BATTLE TODAY

CHICAGO, July 11.—Manager Stallings and his crew fight their last battle of the series here today, and you can wager that the fellows from Boston are primed for a grand scrap.

They don't meet the Chicago lads very often, and it certainly is up to them to make hay while the sun shines, or gather in the games when they are opposed to the Cubs—which is the same thing.

Rudolph is the first pitching selection of Stallings, but there was just the possibility that George Tyler would step in. But the right-hander seemed to have the call.

There was something pulled in the third game, which resulted in a 11 to 6 defeat for the Braves, and one of the strangest battles ever pulled off on a ball field.

UMPIRE REVERSED RULING.

An umpire actually reversed his own decision. On top of that he was the boss of the play. Umpire Byron is the man who did this and it happened in this manner:

With the bases jammed in the seventh Evers hit a red hot poke along the first base line. There was no question about the ball being fair, for it struck the bag. And we all know that the bag is on fair territory.

"Foul!" howled Byron, and Evers let loose and his pals raved with him. Finally Byron appealed to Umpire Johnson. The latter said there was no question but the ball was fair.

Then Byron reversed himself. Evers was credited with a base hit, two runs scored, Lavender was relieved and Bresnahan canned by the umpire.

Now it was up to Byron to make the decision, for he was the man to decide whether it was fair or foul. Of course, his reversal was an admission that he erred, which is something an umpire doesn't do very often.

BAD DAY FOR OTTO HESS.

All hoodoos can be broken. That was proved when Otto Hess was chased from the slab after pitching three innings.

Catcher Kennedy is likely to be out of it for several days. With Bill Sweeney at bat, Catcher shook his finger, Sweeney nicked with the bat just enough to make the ball bounce against one of the fingers on the catcher's bare hand.

It knocked said finger out of plumb. The finger was badly swollen after the game, and it's likely the slim backstop will get several needings from the bench for the next few days.

July 18 Date Set for Chase Ruling

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 11.—A decision on the pleas to dissolve the injunction restraining Hal Chase, the former first baseman of the Chicago American League club, from playing with the Buffalo Federals, has been promised by July 18 by Justice Hubert P. Bissell. "If this injunction is to be dissolved it should be done properly," he said.

$25,000 STARS COME AND JOIN RED SOX TEAM

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

George Ruth, Ernest Shore and Ben Egan, the three star Baltimore players that the Red Sox purchased for more than $25,000, arrived in Boston today and went at once to President Lannin's office. With them was Secretary Wicks of the Baltimore club, who chaperoned the party. Mr. Wicks will see today's game at Fenway Park and go to Providence tomorrow, where the Orioles are scheduled to meet the Providence club.

The three new stars are a strapping big fellows. Ruth, the shortest of the trio, is more than six feet tall. Shores is as tall as Falkenburg, but has more beef on his bones than the former Cleveland pitcher. Egan, whose first name is Arthur (but everybody calls him Ben), looks to be a bigger man than Forrest Cady, the Red Sox catcher. He has a very big pair of hands, but unfortunately he sprained his right thumb on the Fourth of July and has not been able to work since.

Egan, who has caught both Ruth and Shore in most of the games they played for Baltimore, says they are both cracking good pitchers and only need a little experience in the big league to become first class in every respect.

"When Shore reported to the Baltimore club this Spring," said Egan, "I caught him in practice. I told Jack Dunn, owner of the club, at the time that Shore was a finished pitcher and that he knew more than any other twirler on his staff. I don't know where he learned all he knows, but he certainly is a wise hoosier. He has great speed and fine control. As soon as he learns the weaknesses of the big league batsmen I think he will deliver the goods.

"Ruth has been the sensation of the International League. Although a lefthander, he has a fine, fast ball and a great curve. Furthermore, he has control, which many lefthanders lack. When we first played the Providence club these fellows said to me: 'Who's that guy isn't a pitcher; we'll beat him to a frazzle!' Providence has a good ball club, but Ruth has beaten them four straight games this season."

There were some papers to be signed by the three players to complete the deal whereby the former members of the Red Sox outfit, and which these formalities had been attended to the three players left for their hotel. It is possible that Ruth or Shore will be asked to pitch against the Naps this afternoon.

Marsans Case Answer.

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—By agreement between the attorneys for the St. Louis Federal League team and the organized baseball, the date for the filing of an answer to the temporary injunction against Armando Marsans, who jumped the Cincinnati Reds to play with the St. Louis Federals, has been extended to next Wednesday.

$70,000 HOUSE TO SEE SMITH-CARPENTIER GO

Special Cable to the Boston American.

LONDON, July 11.—Gunboat Smith of America and Georges Carpentier of France, each of whom is little known in England, are expected to draw a $70,000 house when they meet in the ring at Olympia here next Thursday night. The men are to clash in a heavyweight battle for the winner's share of a $25,000 purse.

Smith is now down to 181 pounds, and will most likely enter the ring one pound heavier. The critics here are enthusiastic over the American's condition.

Smith has had plenty of sparring partners, but most of them have quit after their first session. Most of the training work has fallen to the lot of the negro, Bob Armstrong, who keeps Smith busy for several rounds each day.

Without boasting, Smith is confident of a victory over the Frenchman, whose triumph over Bombardier Wells made him quite unpopular here. Smith is now taking things easy, certain that he is in the best of condition and will so continue until the battle.

Carpentier is still conditioning himself at Mantet, France, although reports that he is in the best possible shape are anxiously awaiting the fight. He says that he is certain to win, but that the match will be a strenuous one.

Carpentier is a quick boxer as well as an aggressive one. His aggressiveness will make him a ready mixer with Smith.

The American has a slight advantage in reach and height and is also a favorite in the betting.

Sally's Love for Him Overcomes Her and Max Is Forced to Speak Plainly

By MAX

JULY 2.—This has been a busy week with both a "little work and a little play to keep us going." I have made sixty dollars on commission and believe me I feel greatly encouraged. As soon as my little fund reaches the hundred-dollar mark I shall start a bank account. It won't compare favorably with the thousands I used to put in, but pride is too expensive for me to afford.

The night that I took Marian Church to the Vanthorpe Sally sat at a near-by table. The next evening she phoned me.

"Max, why don't your old friends see anything of you any more? Have you found new ones to take their places?" purred Sally.

"I'm just busy, Sally—I'm a worker now."

"Do you call it work to beau a dazzling little beauty about on the tr'eois, Max?"

I began to wonder how Kitty might scratch instead of purr if she knew that the beauty was a little girl who works where I am employed.

Before the conversation was over, I found myself engaged to bring Manette Saturday noon. I knew my niece would be delighted at a chance to visit the rambling old place that Sally had converted from an abandoned farm to a delicious Summer home. But somehow I did not want to go. I wonder if the thought that I could not see Marian Church for two days had anything to do with it?

Saturday morning Sally blew into the office fairly resplendent in a black and white tunic costume that shrieked of the Rue de la Paix. She said she was in town for some shopping and thought she would pick me up and start so we would be in time for a late luncheon if we hurried. The only thing to do was to offer to take her up to the club for a lunch on the balcony and to phone Manette to join us there.

"Can you afford it, Max?" asked Sally with a great play of darkling gray eyes and black lashes as she came closer and spoke with tender vehemence.

THE RIVALS

I looked up and found Marion Church's eyes fixed on us. She blushed and looked away, but I wondered how Sally's sachet and jade handled parasol and bag, topped by Dutch silver, were impressing the girl who was yielding me a sweet, shy friendship such as I had not known since my boyhood. There was a distinct air of possession in Sally's manner—and I leave it to you, Friend Diary—what can a man do to offset that manner when a woman chooses to assume it?

I found myself following meekly in Mrs. Spencer's wake as she swept out of the office. I wanted to say goodby to Maid Marian of the dusky tresses—and then I reflected that I was acting as if I were going on a trip to Europe instead of starting off for a week-end within motoring distance of the city.

Sally was very charming all during luncheon, and the balcony was so cool and breezy that I found my good humor being restored. On the way down Sally was so gracious to my little niece and told of such a list of pageties she had prepared for little Miss Fifteen that the child seemed in fair way to become her adoring slave.

I found my visit one long tete-a-tete, for Manette was always off to fish a group of young people with whom Sally had made a list of engagements for Miss Manette that caused the child to become as airy as any society butterfly of debutante age.

But until Sunday evening things went on pretty smoothly. And then, Friend Diary, I had to send myself a telegram from the village office and rush up to the city on an evening train, leaving Manette to follow on an early train Monday.

Mrs. Hasting's neighbor of sailly had taken the young people out on her little sloop yacht, and Sally and I had just finished an early tea out in the gardens and were watching the sun dip low across the greenfield fields that sloped down to the water. Then IT happened.

"Sue Hastings is going to marry that Lardner boy who is out on the boat with her and our kiddies."

"Young Lardner?" I exclaimed. "Why, he hasn't a penny to pay for a license—and yet he has the nerve to be planning to take unto himself a wife." A most injudicious remark, Friend Diary, as later events proved.

"But Sue has money enough for two, Max—and she loves him, why should she see him struggling in a stuffy office for a meagre fifty a week when she has luxury? There is nothing that hurts a woman so much as to know that the man she cares for is going without all the things that make life worth while when she has them as a matter of course."

"But a man doesn't have to go without on fifty a week, Sally. I know from experience."

Sally gazed at me with misty eyes. "Fifty a week—and you, Max! Who you paid Tompkins that much?"

"Fifty a week—to be accurate," I said grimly, with the idea of making the gap between Max, worker, and Jack Spencer's idler as wide as possible. I failed. I seem to fail at most things.

"Poor boy—my poor boy. It isn't fair, Max, when you had everything you were ready to share with me and now you mustn't let it make any difference that I have more to give than my poor little self."

And Sally tumbled into my arms, which, on my word of honor, Friend Diary, were not open to receive her.

Once before I found Sally in my arms—and that time I may have been necessary before the fact. This trip I wasn't guilty of helping even "post factor." I felt like a cad as I somehow disengaged myself from that fragrant mass of clinging arms and lips and softly billowing hair.

"Sally, dear—you're the best and most generous little pal in all the world. But that is just why I can't let you sacrifice yourself to a human parasite. That might be good enough for Sue Hastings. But you deserve the best a man has to offer—money, position—everything. A man's best—little Sally."

"And you haven't it to give me, Max?" she cried so low that I wondered how it could pierce my ears as it did.

"No, dear."

PAINFUL THOUGHTS

It hurts to write about it even on your pages, Friend Diary. When a woman offers a man an unselfish, uncalculating love and he has to hurt her by coldness—the pain of it reacts on him beyond any power of expression he has ever known.

I ran away from the path in Sally's wide eyes two days ago. But I think it will be months before I cease seeing that little look of childish failure to understand in the eyes of the woman whose love for me seems that I must cease to claim even the friendship I had come to mean so much to me.

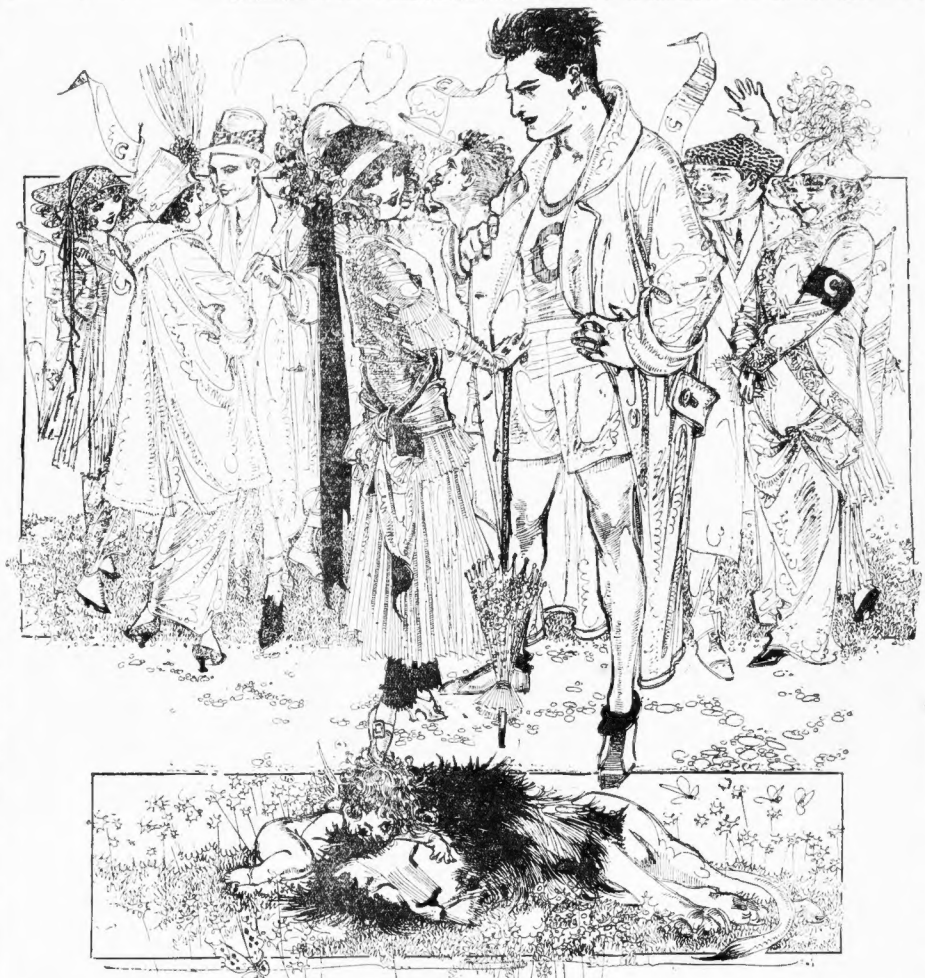
I have failed in business and in friendship. I wonder how it will be with love.

(In the next instalment, Max tells of a class reunion and how difficult he found it to be gallant to two women at the same time.)

"Taming a Lion"

1914, by International News Service

By NELL BRINKLEY



IT doesn't take such a "terribly big" girl to do it! He's a premier sprinter—holds cups and championships—flat races, hurdle, all sorts of split-mile dashes—but he can't run fast enough to get away from Danny—his legs are willing enough, but he has a weak heart.

The minute Dan pushes his gilded locks out of his eyes, takes a hitch in his belt, rubs his toe in the dirt and enters in competition, this coolhearted title-holder can't keep his eyes on the goal of single blessedness—the halo of hermitage fades like a star when the sun comes up—and he turns aside into the byways to smile into the eyes of a girl.

And Dan curls up his toes, casts up his eye in bliss, and snuggles, snoozing, into the dangerous make of a purring lion! I know a lion can purr, because once I slipped my hand behind the bars and scratched my fingers through the beautiful biscuit-colored fur on the shoulder of one—also I know the other kind of a lion can purr, because I've seen many a one basking in the caress of the up-turned soft brown eyes of a little maid just five-feet-um.—NELL BRINKLEY.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

MISTER & Missus Bingo came up to the house last nite, it was the first time I ever seen them, they knew Pa & Ma out in Denver.

Missus Bingo was a very pritty woman & she had the sheest smile. I was stuck on her rite away. If I cant have a wife like her or Ma wen I grow up I am going to stay singel & salve my munny. But Mister Bingo wasent a nice looking man, anyhow I dident like him, his eyes was like the points of nails & his hands was cold wen he shook hands & he dident have any grip to his hand.

Well, said Pa, wen everybody was setting down, how is everything out in dear old Denver? I haven't been out there for few years, Pa sed.

The town is all right, but the people in the town are setting on my nerves, sed Mister Bingo. I cant main as much munny there as I use to main.

It is reely too bad about you, sed Missus Bingo, you have most munny now than you can ever spend. Why in the world dont you sell a little plenhur out of it now while you are living?

That is the rite idee, sed Pa. I can't see much sense in having a fat bankroll & bum helth. How is the old man Billings, the good old sport?

The less we say about him the better, sed Mister Bingo. I always sed that he wasent a good man. & you always stuck up for him, he sed to Pa.

I always stuck up for him because I liked him, sed Pa. If I like a man I stick up for him. I ain't a Jellyfish, Pa sed. I always thought a lot of old Billings.

But you were nevver a keen judge of human nater, sed Mister Bingo. I used to laff at you wen you had sum fellow sized up to be a good fellow. You had a way of seeing near good in people that was in them. Not so with me, sed Mister Bingo.

Well, sed Pa, here is the way I feel about judging human nater. I will admit that I was nevver much of a hand to put a man under a mikroskope. I nevver felt much like judging anybody anyway. I think it is better to try to find the good in the people you meet than to get a dimond drill & dig down into them for a mean streak. I have lived fairly long on that principul, Pa sed, & I think I will be abel to keep up the good work. I do.

I think that is stinkie of you, sed Missus Bingo. I wish my husband could be near like that.

How is the world sun a man be like Mister Bingo. I am a happy maker. That is my plesher, I sed wen I went to Denver that I wud be one of the richest men there in ten years & I have lived up to my word.

Well, sed Pa, now that you have sucsede you ought to feel fine. You are sorter of a man than you were wen you were poor.

Certinly I am sorter of a man, I have the money now, sed Mister Bingo.

Well, sed Pa, I feel sorry for you & Missus Bingo & Ma & me all are the same thing, & Mister Bingo is well known kind of erly. Munny ain't everything.

Ready to Be Saved

"Hurry up and save that girl!" bawled the fire chief. "Why don't you hurry?"

The fireman bent over and whispered:

"I'll have her on the ladder in a minute, chief. I'm waiting for her to curl her hair."

Up-to-Date Jokes

A story is told of a Dutchman who arrived in the United States on Decoration Day, and, noticing the flags flying and the people going to the cemetery with large bundles of flowers, he asked what it meant.

"Why, this is Decoration Day," said one. "Don't you know what that is?"

The Dutchman confessed that he didn't. The man then explained it.

"Isn't there some one at rest in the cemetery whose grave you would like to decorate with flowers?" asked the man.

The Dutchman shook his head and replied:

"Dose peeble vat graves I like to degorate are not dead yet."

At a Caledonian banquet in London a scotchman who had settled in the metropolis made a speech, in which Scotland and all things Scottish were so fulsomely praised that an Englishman, who sat next him, said when he had finished:

"If Scotland is all that you Scotsmen say it is, why don't you stay there instead of coming here?"

"Well," answered the Scotsman, "A'll tell ye hoo it wis wi' me. When A wis in business in Fife Ah fand a the fowk wis just as cliver as me, sir, an' Ah cudna gar the twa en's meet. Sae Ah cood away South, an' sin' syne, man, Ah've been daein' rale weel."

First Countryman (seeing a letter-box for the first time): "What's that for, Tom?"

Second Countryman: "I dunno; looks like a religious sort o' thing."

First Countryman: "No, it can't belong to no religious folk. It says, 'No coll'ctions on Sundays.'"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

GIVE YOURSELF A CHANCE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I loved a gentleman at first sight, have been angry with him for the past two years and don't care for him now. I met many other gentlemen, but don't care for them as much. I would like to know whether I would care for another gentleman as I did for the first, whom I don't care for now.

ROSE B.

THAT is something only the future will tell, but there is no doubt you will learn to care for another man even more than you cared for the first. But don't keep the first love too much in memory.

ALL MEN ARE SO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am just eighteen and have been keeping company with a young man three years, engaged for the past year. He is supremely very fond of me. But extremely jealous and always has been. Do you think it a wise plan to marry a man with that tendency?

K. H. F.

THERE never was a man who was not jealous, and I think a very tactful girl to manage the most jealous of his sex.

If this man is extremely jealous, you say, and without grounds, I am sure you will be happier without him.

HE IS EXTREMELY FOOLISH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a young man five years my senior. I met him one day when not quite eighteen and he told me to wear longer dresses and put up my hair. This young man is on the road as a traveling salesman and I have not seen him since then.

Do you think he meant anything by that?

CONSTANT READER.

I THINK he was both foolish and impertinent, as the length of a girl's dresses is a matter to be decided by her mother. Don't put your heart on him.

CERTAINLY NOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am an engaged girl and have recently received a photograph from an old acquaintance. Kindly advise me if it would be an injustice to my fiance to acknowledge this card.

H. L.

OBLIGATIONS to your fiance are strained if they result in mutilating you impolite to your old friends. Acknowledge the card by all means.

How English Beauties Keep Faces Youthful

Christian Miller, F. C. I., noted English health expert, eliminates the need for a beauty specialist. He says: "The American women, known for their beauty of face, can teach us the desirable secret."

Another valuable lesson to be learned from the English women is that she does not go in much for cosmetics. Miss Miller, one of whose duties was to superintend the toilet of Queen Victoria, relates how the much-used way Lady ... method of keeping the face girlish-looking and healthy. Ordinary municipal wax, used for cold cream, rejuvenates the worst complexion. Women here may easily acquire the same aids was being obtainable at drug stores and nearly to the United States and Canada. It is applied at night and washed off in the morning. Only one ounce is sufficient to complexion a bad complexion. It has a cooling action in spraying the face free from the particles of dust and distilled water also would have a similar effect.

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed

Arranged from the Photo-Drama by A. H. Woods
At the Liberty Theatre, corner 42d St. and Broadway, New York

(Novelized)

By A. A. WATERBURY

"There will be no trial," Zoubatoff looked at Rolfe with kneeling brows and lowering eyes of hatred as he spoke.

"What!"

"Now you will realize how dangerous it is for a stranger to interfere with the Russian police!"

"I know the power of the Okrana. I know you can make an innocent guilty and the guilty innocent"——

"I see you are well informed," Zoubatoff chose to smile now, but there was a quality of steel-trap grimness even in his smile. He meant to railroad this cock-sure young chap to a living grave in the salt mines of dreary Siberia. There the secret of Baron Andrey's death would be effectively buried. And whether the Russian Jewess and the American journalist lived or died would concern neither the Okrana nor the world at large.

Rolfe seemed quite undaunted at the prospect of Siberia looking so horribly before him. His manner had a certain Yankee effectiveness now, with a return of the breezy insouciance of the imprudent youth of today.

"So you should be better informed, Monsieur Zoubatoff. I'll tell you that on my way here I stopped at the American embassy and told the Ambassador what I was coming here for and made an appointment with him at 4 o'clock. If I don't show up he will wonder what has happened to me."

AT BAY

Rolfe smiled pleasantly, but Zoubatoff did not relax a muscle of his grim gray mask of a face.

"Pavlac, here is the order for the commitment of Mr. Rolfe. He leaves for Siberia with the next batch of prisoners."

Count Rostov's comment was illuminating. He knew the horror to which that order consigned the man he had called friend and the girl who had lived as friend and companion to his Margery.

"Good God! Zoubatoff, you are not going to send him, too?"

"Yes. In the interest of Baron Andrey's family it is necessary that Anna Mirrel's story should be buried with this man Rolfe."

The man Rolfe stood studying Zoubatoff. Would the man actually have the nerve to attempt to put through that order? was his thought. He seemed to forget that what he was contemplating in surprise at this daring tyranny was himself—Julian Rolfe—most intimately.

Count Rostov was trying to reconcile the picture that his knowledge of his own country's geography gave him of the wide, wide vast barren wastes with formidable mountains like jagged teeth against a dim horizon—a plain that stretched to the foothills of sober black and white—he saw a plodding human chain, stumbling and staggering to its death in life. And in that weary procession of outworn humanity he saw Julian Rolfe with manacled hands and feet dragging a heavy chain.

The tinkle of a phone punctuated his tedious fancy. Zoubatoff answered from his desk.

"The American Embassy. Excellency," said he.

"Shut him off," ordered Zoubatoff.

"You dare not shut him off," remarked Nikolai Rostov.

"But I have."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular all day, and business was of fair volume at the final session. A few issues were notably weak. New Haven sold down to 55¾ in New York and to 56¼ in Boston. It made a partial recovery in both markets. Missouri Pacific got more support and finished only a shade lower. American Telephone was one of the weakest stocks.

At the close in New York advances included Chesapeake & Ohio 1, St. Paul ¼, Canadian Pacific ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, Steel ¼, American Smelting ¼ and Baltimore & Ohio ¼. Among declines were Southern Pacific ¼, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading ¼, New Haven ¼, Erie ¼, American Telephone 1¼ at 119, American Can ¼, Northern Pacific ¼, Union Pacific ¼ and New York, Ontario & Western 1¼. Amalgamated Copper was unchanged.

In Boston at the end New Haven was at 56¼, off 7/8, and other recessions were Boston & Maine ¼, American Telephone 1¼, Granby 1 and Shoe & Elevated was up ¼ at 100¼. Selling of New Haven was chiefly by small holders who are afraid of a government suit against the road. The decline of New York, Ontario & Western was largely sympathetic. Missouri Pacific made a new low at 9¾. Most of the selling of New Haven in Boston was by a brokerage house. One operator, who has been a conspicuous bear in "Mop," was the largest seller of New Haven in New York today. The weakness of Americans in London was said to be partly due to fears of trouble in home rule in Ulster.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

The New York bank statement is brief as follows—average statement:

Excess each reserve $7,182,350, decrease $11,154,500. Loans, decrease $81,822,000. Specie, decrease $23,240,-000. Legal tender, increase $2,240,000. Net deposits, decrease $41,818,000. Circulation, increase $282,000. Reserve, decrease $27,394,000. Special, decrease $12,947,000. Legal tenders, decrease $14,447,000. Net deposits, decrease $41,587,000. Reserve, decrease $6,112,250.

SELLS BEACON TRUST INTEREST.

Acting in conformity with the recent act of the Legislature forbidding trust companies to own more than a 10 per cent interest in another trust company, the Old Colony Trust Company has disposed of its interest in the Beacon Trust Company to a syndicate headed by Charles H. Long, the president of the Beacon. The Old Colony management had over three years in which to comply with the act, but felt better satisfied to come within the provisions promptly. With the Bay State Trade at Branch and the Numerous Trust Company of Boston also in the Old Colony only 2 sales temporarily its interest in the American Trust Company.

PRESIDENT STILL FOR WARBURG.

There is more interest at Washington now over the attitude of the Senate Banking Committee towards Messrs. Jones and Warburg than over legislation on trusts. The President is soon is going to carry the fight for his nominees to the floor of the Senate and the battle will probably begin on Monday. He will pause no one as a substitute for Mr. Warburg until after the Senate has acted. He expects that both of these nominees will be confirmed. The contest will be over Mr. Jones. If the administration can get assurances that Mr. Warburg will be confirmed, too, it will not appear before the committee. One statement as to the outlook reads:

"A change of heart Democrats made it possible for the Senate to vote to overthrow the filibuster against the bankers' currency bill. Democratic insurgents and the men who have been opposing the measure will be powerful communities.

"The fact that the rule of the majority of the committee on interstate commerce, which has been in charge of the trust bills, will be applied to the Warburg nomination is considered significant. It is seen as a coordinate branch of the banking and currency committee. The latter is the committee which is dealing unfairly in his statements to the Senate, and is acting as unwarranted censure on the committee's action.

"Senator Weeks will move Mr. Warburg's confirmation, and the Senate has in prescribed method for doing business, and that Mr. Warburg should not to as others have done."

SITUATION UNCERTAIN.

After bankers had held a conference in New York as to ways and means for providing for the payment of $10,000,000 international and Great Northern road notes which mature on August 1 it was understood that no plan to provide the money had been decided upon. It is expected that a time extension will be sought. The road is a Missouri Pacific subsidiary. Small interests in it are large. Much of the pressure upon Gould issues has been due to selling by foreigners. This was noticeable yesterday in New York on direct orders from Europe, many from Holland.

A brokerage house which is supposed to act for the Goulds at times is reported to have liquidated 145,000 shares of Missouri Pacific so far this year. Wall Street appears to think that Gould interests are not likely to provide much money for the contemplation of roads with which the family has been identified.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

It is said that sales of copper metal are again of small volume, but that 12½ cents a pound is being paid.

P. L. Stillken & Co. have issued a leaflet giving June high and low prices and dividends for July.

Invitation for Proposals of Land

The State Board of Education, by Act of Legislature, is authorized to expend a sum not exceeding two hundred thousand dollars, together with any moneys that may be received as gifts, or by the sale of the present school property, for the purpose of taking or purchase of a new site for the Massachusetts Normal Art School, and providing the necessary buildings. If sufficient funds are available the present year, the balance, one hundred thousand dollars, will be expended during the next fiscal year.

With the view of securing the best and most desirable site, at the lowest possible price, the State Board of Education invites proposals from holders of land for parcels of land as a site, under the following conditions, thus giving duly advertised opportunity to bring to their attention the location, area, and price or prices of such offerings.

The Board believes the site eventually selected should assure sufficient space for all buildings that may be required in the future, and provide an adequate development of the School, and should provide an area representing not less than ten acres of net land and not more than about [illegible] by 800 feet.

No tracts will be considered unless located near enough to the centre of the metropolitan district of Boston as to assure comparatively easy access, preferably that they should be within the limits of five-cent fares. It is desirable that tracts offered shall be directly on through trolley lines; reasonably close to a railroad station, and possible so situated that a spur track may be run from the steam road to the depot-ets of the present school property, and from one to the other. The tracts offered should be in an area in which dignified buildings would find suitable environment and toward which day and night students would be equally attracted. The Board has given due consideration to three of which the school has been driven by encroachment of buildings, from the overcrowding of those in the present location, and is convinced that, warrants the Board in considering only those cities presenting north light practically unobstructed by future buildings, and yet allow the present premises to be occupied for the School until the new building shall be ready for occupancy. The Board proposes to make full investigation as to available sites on its own account, and any offer of land or information as to it may be rejected. Attention is also called to the fact that on land must be found that the present site of the School may not be disposed of without the approval of the Governor and Council of Education.

The State Board of Education will receive proposals, accompanied by plans of tracts offered, in writing, addressed to the inch up to August 15, 1914, filed at the office of the State Board of Education, room 2oo, Ford Building, Boston.

New Spirit of New England Aroused by the Salem Disaster

Failure of Western City to Entice Burned-Out Manufacturers Away Shows Confidence of Latter in Community.

The new spirit of New England has begun to manifest itself. The campaign which started a few years ago to arouse the confidence of the people of New England in themselves and in the future of their community is now beginning to yield its rich return. Consider the significance of this item of news from Columbus, Ohio:

After the Salem fire the Columbus Chamber of Commerce sent its field agent, John A. Kelley, East for the purpose of inducing Salem manufacturers who had been burned out to locate in Columbus. He has just returned and reports to his organization that not a Salem manufacturer is willing to entertain a proposition from Columbus.

"I NEVER BEFORE SAW SUCH LOYALTY TO A CITY ON THE PART OF ITS CITIZENS," said Mr. Kelley. "WITHOUT EXCEPTION, THEY TOLD ME THAT THEY FELT IT TO BE THEIR DUTY TO REMAIN AND HELP REBUILD SALEM."

There is a lesson and an inspiration in this news item. It affords us an example of the enterprise beyond New England. It shows us how sharp is their organized competition for business so keen that it almost reaches the point of ghoulishness. It affords us an example of the activity which we ourselves must display if we keep abreast the progressive cities of the West.

But the failure of this Western raid on New England is an inspiration to New England enterprise. It proves to us that there was latent in New England business men a pride and confidence in the future of their community which need only to be aroused in order to become invincible.

New England was palpably suffering from the unmatched activity of the communities beyond our border. They worked for business while we did nothing. Several years ago the business organizations of New England awakened to the danger of this unequal struggle for business. With the assistance of the Boston AMERICAN they have aroused in this section a new spirit which has manifested itself at Salem, which has given to Boston the largest Chamber of Commerce in the world, a 1915 movement, the Port Directors, a splendid increase of foreign shipping and has aroused other New England cities in like proportion.

Women Should Sit in the Constitutional Convention of Every State

And a Man Must Be Unintelligent or Dishonest to Oppose Them—or, at Least, One Who Does Not THINK.

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

Women demand the right to sit in the Constitutional Convention called for 1915 in the State of New York.

They should have places in that convention, and in every Constitutional Convention.

The Constitution of the State is the basis of law-making and of justice.

What the Constitution forbids cannot be done.

What the Constitution does not expressly allow cannot be done if the judges choose to say so.

We can give you a reason easily enough if you ask WHY women should have a share in constitutional changes and improvements.

Not long ago, when a law was passed protecting women from excessive hours of labor at night, some eminently respectable judges declared that the law was not constitutional.

They thought it was not constitutional for the lawmakers of the State to protect women against exploitation, and the worst kind of night labor.

Other judges have been found to declare that the attempt to regulate bake shops, removing filth, tuberculous bakeries, etc., was also unconstitutional.

And other judges have declared unconstitutional laws intended to protect children from child labor exploiters.

If you ask WHY women should attend a Constitutional Convention as members, the answer is that women are interested in bread-making, in hours of labor at night for women, in the health and life of the children whom they produce—and they ought to have a share in the laws that regulate the States and in the Constitution that says what laws can and cannot be made.

There is nothing in the laws of the State of New York to prevent women being delegates to the Constitutional Convention. There is nothing in common sense or in common decency opposed to their being delegates.

The women of the State should concentrate on the effort to have as many constitutional delegates as possible WOMEN, and thus secure for the State the benefit of woman's advice and experience in the fundamental controlling law-making.

A committee, headed by Miss Lillian D. Wald, Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, Miss Cornelia E. Bryce and Miss Anne Rhodes, has been formed to secure for women proper recognition in the coming New York Constitutional Convention.

It is a good committee from top to bottom and should have active support.

The Easiest Way

Chairman Osborne of the New York Democracy is wasting a lot of time and money in going up-State to sound out the Sulzer strength. He'll find that it is overpowering if he merely takes the trouble to ask Sulzer.

I Wish I Was a Rock

This verse, which appears in a New York advertisement, promises to be as popular as Gelett Burgess' "Purple Cow."

I WISH I was a rock a-settin' on a hill,
Doin' nothin' all day long but just a-settin' still;
I wouldn't work, I wouldn't eat, I wouldn't even wash,
I'd just set there a thousand years and rest myself, b'gosh.

Where We Are Silly

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

THOMAS JEFFERSON, one of the fifty-one of the leaders of men and one of nature's masterpieces, wrote these words in July, 1790. He proposed to Congress "to reduce every branch of the decimal ratio already established for coins, and thus bring the calculation of the principal affairs of life within the arithmetic of every man who can multiply and divide."

After a lapse of 124 years the American people do the very obstinate thing of refusing. Our nation, the leading people of the earth, with an obduracy inexplicable, still use pounds, ounces, grains, inches, feet, yards and miles.

People that will say "10 mills make 1 cent, 10 cents 1 dime, 10 dimes 1 dollar;" will, with the impulses of a mule, say "437½ grains make 1 ounce, avoirdupois; 16 ounces make 1 pound, 100 pounds 1 hundredweight, 20 hundredweight 1 ton."

Here is a mix of 437½ and 16 with true decimals—10, 20, 100. No explanation has ever been offered. And here is a table of vagaries:

Pounds.	Ounces.	Drachms.	Scruples.	Grains.
1 equals	12	96	288	5,760
1 equals	16	256	...	7,000

The first line is apothecaries' weight and the second avoirdupois.

The standard troy weight, now authorized by the laws of England, and copied in our laws, agrees with the apothecaries' weight in pounds, ounces and grains, but differs in divisions of the ounce, which by the former scale contains 20 pennyweights of 24 grains each. Thus, the troy and apothecaries' weight in pounds are agreed as to 5,760 grains, but the avoirdupois pound contains 7,000 grains; but they are troy grains, this vagary having no grains of its own.

In lengths, volumes and areas the confusion is greater than in the units of mass or weight here given. So great has been the trouble that the government of the United States has at great expense employed hundreds of experts to work out and publish these thousands of comparisons. But had the Congress in 1790 passed the law the recommendation of the wise Jefferson at least 124 years of brain-harassing labor would have been avoided.

One would think that the custom house, exchange and mint people would rise and demand plain "common sense" in weighing and measuring. Thus: The metric unit of weight is the kilogram; of length, the meter, and of capacity, the liter. These are divided by tenths, hundredths and thousandths, and multiplied by tens, hundreds and thousands, in your heads, and no pencil and paper are needed. Likewise prices and "so much per."

Incalculable work could be entirely dispensed with by the adoption of the decimal system by the entire world. Many nations have so adopted by law. The good U. S. A. is one of the few that have so enacted, but the people still refuse to use the system.

This singular fact has been commented upon by mentalists, and the only explanation is the fearful curse —habit. Ancient habits and customs are excessively hard to overcome. Note this fact of a law without a penalty; for if the United States had a law of imprisonment for all persons refusing to use the metric system, then an era almost new in the history of human progress would be here right away.

Go to, now, and use 16 sixteenths make 1 inch, 12 inches make 1 foot, 3 feet make 1 yard, 5½ yards 1 rod, perch or pole; 40 rods 1 furlong, 8 furlongs 1 mile, 3 miles 1 league, 69 1-6 miles (nearly) 1 degree.

No wonder scientists are astonished to see what senseless things humans will do when they look over hundred of pages of conflicting measures, used for thousands of years, even from Babylonian times, without change. Mind mystery deepens, for scientists see that man uses these measures long after he knows better.
